Thread: "Awkward" Type

Mister Slyther - February 5, 2017, 6:31 am

Uni gave me a task around last week. This task basically was a collection of words and we had to pick one and incorporate the definition within type.

So I went for the word Awkward since it was easy and straight forward, made thumbnails and then chose my solution.

We were given text that we had to layout using the idea of "Hierarchy", what's the most important text to what's less important to the viewers.

I used Illustrator since that is best for anything to do with vectors and type.

I believe this concept would have worked better on a word like "Annoying" haha but nice work!

I like it. Colors are nice and definitely convey the feeling of the word choice. Your choice of positioning and sizing worked well. All in all good work.

Shouldn't the A be the second big letter on the top?
