As soon as it played I was going mental.

Grizzlies - February 5, 2017, 8:41 pm

Amazing!

I can't wait for it. Loved the first season.

phunted - February 5, 2017, 8:42 pm

I am not happy about this.

I'm only getting more excited which is going to drive me nuts.

Will this new series have the series one characters?

Kiyo - February 6, 2017, 12:01 am

I feel as if Stranger Things couldn't really get better than the first season. Just gonna keep dragging the show along and milk it. We'll wait and see, though.

That's only true if they make more than 3 seasons, and the screen writers themselves said they don't like that idea, nor does Netflix

Excerpt: <http://collider.com/stranger-things-season-2-matt-ross-duffer-interview/#netflix>

Quote:MATT: But even though this show has been successful, there's no pressure to make it 13 episodes. People say, "They need to make way more episodes," but I like to think one of the reasons it works for people is because it's paced and it feels like a movie, and that's because it's not too long. I think, if we pushed it to 13 episodes, we'd have to start coming up with all these bullshit adventures they're going on, that aren't directly tied to the main tension. Eight felt about right. But if we're developing Season 2 and it feels like seven or nine or eleven, Netflix would support any of those lengths.

How long do you see this series running? Have you thought about future seasons?

ROSS: We don't know, specifically. We're very weary of making it go on past the point it should. You want to end on a high note. That's the goal. We've had initial discussions, but we haven't quite landed on it.

MATT: It seems hard to imagine it as a seven or eight season series. It just doesn't feel like it could sustain that. At a certain point, it would start to feel ridiculous. And Netflix is also very supportive of that. Regardless of how successful the show is or becomes, they'll want it to end when the story feels like it should end. I don't think they want to milk things to the point where it starts to become stale.

I didnt see this commercial must have been in the first half of the game because i missed that part but I cant wait i hope its as good as season 1

Youtube Comments - February 6, 2017, 7:12 pm

Awsome I stoped on the second episode to wait untill I can binge watch the entire season, I didnt know it ended.

Will get started now :D

FROst - February 6, 2017, 7:36 pm

I'm so excited I didn't even see this during the SuperBowl. I'm just a little mad that they came out with this super early and I'm hyped af.
