Thread: Drop Shipping

VirtualFrost - February 8, 2017, 8:24 am

I was just looking through things and went to this rule

Quote:Drop Shipping

Guides, threads, and services related to drop shipping will not be allowed on HF.

I was wondering people sell Shopfiy methods where you get the customers details and then you go to another site and order it for them from that seller.

Is this drop shipping?

Is selling this kind of method supposed to be allowed, or is the rule stating we don't discuss it publicly, but you're able to have methods that talk about it?

Well I'm 90% sure that "and services" will fall into Shopify as it's a service.

TRAUMA - February 8, 2017, 11:21 am

That's actually a really good point and I never thought of it like that..

Enzio - February 8, 2017, 11:37 am

In a way, yes it would be classified as something that is not allowed. Though, I'm sure there's a neutral zone where this would still be allowed.

You don't need to Dropship to use Shopify, but people around that scene around here know that it's the main way to go. At least I think it's called drop shipping from the kinds of definitions I've read.

Yes, a lot of people using Shopify for dropshipping, so I'm not too sure - but not everyone uses it with dropshipping. I know a ton of people who do POD and PLP on their Shopify stores.

We'll have to wait for Omniscient's take on this.

I agree with this. Thats not something any of us can say yes or no too. Omni will have to be the one to define this one considering the rather large marketplace for shopify.

I know it can be done legitimately, but I know this one guide I got months ago said to make the orders through x website so you don't hold stock

It's dropshipping and it's disallowed. When we disallowed an item, we don't allow products that revolve around the idea on top of any discussion.

Didn't know that ?

The comment I quoted.

If OP can not interpret the rules which are pretty straight forward basic English, probably should not be doing that stuff to begin with.

Common sense apparently is not so common now a days. ?

I only ask about this as the method I purchased is from a guy who purchased multiple stickies and has had many sales when he did it. I don't believe he's still selling it, or he may be selling the same method but under a new name. At that point I thought it was okay to talk about it inside of a method that you purchased and not publicly talk about methods/tutorials here

Why do you quote me and say "Close the thread before you get a warning or something even more stupid dude lol." I did not open this thread. Just posted my thoughts.

I have seen couple people sell Shopify mentoring/eBooks which did include dropshipping but I didn't think of the rule back then.

Sorry I guess mr.perfect

All good mate.

Armada - February 10, 2017, 8:08 am

Oh calm down. jeez.

Its common sense. consider the SST rules now.

The removal of the SST section happened, but we are still allowed to discuss to a various degree about the topic. Minimal as it might be,

Drop shipping is disallowed to the amount of fraud involved.

Hell I could run a bunch of drop shipping services that would be more than lucrative, however, disallowed I dont even bother bringing it up.
