Thread: Why shouldn't I kill myself?

Jesse Pinkman. - February 14, 2017, 4:52 am

Now firstly, this isn't a cry for attention. More just a question.

I am not suicidal in the sense I'm depressed and want to leave this world cause I can't deal.

I just wonder, it intrigues me death. I don't overly want to live, but death interests me. Why shouldn't I kill myself and see what it's like. It would be nothing, I would be nothing. I would become nothing, I find it hard to wrap my head around it but.

I would, just nothing.

Why shouldn't I go and do it?

Dennis - February 14, 2017, 4:53 am

Nothing. Go kill yourself. Bye.

Verus - February 14, 2017, 4:54 am

Because there's much more in life than killing your self and taking no2.

Look at the bright motivational side.

Because offing yourself is the most selfish act you can do- you're not realizing the affect it will have around your friends and love ones.

I can say in short that suicide is not generally regarded as courageous, since suicide usually comes from a misplaced sense of hopelessness and the virtues are about judging things for what they are and not merely what they seem to be. Brains are very complicated hunks of machinery that sometimes make things seem other than they really are, and virtue requires the wisdom to avoid rash action based on misfiring machinery.

Hmm, we will all die yes, and the only thing making me not "want to" do it is that life is enjoyable in short bursts, and nothingness is you know. Nothing.

What if it's not nothing and for some weird illogical reason I stay coherent? I stay in spirit form :o

I recognise and understand the negative impact it would have on others. So I wouldn't do it, but in a hypothetical scenario. I kind of want to be dead, to experience it, if that makes sense. Die on my own terms. But if I'm dead I guess it isn't a experience

Suicide by jumping would be very interesting. As you hit the ground before your brain realises.

You fall with an acceleration go 9.8m/s and your brain can't catch up, by the time you hit the ground your still a few metres up.

So you are dead but your only just processing being a few metres above the ground :o

The selfishness argument has always been very weird to me. I didn't ask to be born into this world, why should I not have the option to leave it? If I'm an adult, should I not have authority over my own body and what I do with it? To me it seems more selfish to tell others what they can and can't do with their lives.

Mr. Robot - February 14, 2017, 5:03 am

Because you only die once and if there truly is nothing after then leave your mark on this world whether it be infamy or just by having kids so there is a future that can survive the human race and earth.

I have often thought of death and what it brings or I guess, what it doesn't and came to the conclusion to say fuck everything - there is only one reason to stay and that's to experience "something" before you spend eternity not experiencing "nothing"

Tree of Life - February 14, 2017, 5:03 am don't do it man. Killing yourself is stupid, you'll die. There is plenty of time to be dead, don't cut your life short.

I can kinda see what you mean about you want to experience it. But as stated, the impact it would have on your close ones would be completely unfair.

And, you don't know? Maybe that's just it? Maybe there is no experience?

I would just say, the day where you are supposed to die will come, there is no need to set it up yourself. ?

Korvo - February 14, 2017, 5:52 am

Bro killing yourself isn't the answer.

I can totally relate that you're depressed, but that is a temporary problem. Depression CAN and WILL go away over time, you have to take small steps bro, killing your self would just be over reacting to the situation. There's a saying that helps me out sometimes "Yesterday is history & tomorrow is mystery". You don't know what will come as time goes on, things can get way better..and honestly nothing good comes easy. Don't jump to such a harsh action man..Depression does end..I've been there and know how it goes.

Shoot me a pm if you want man, Or hop on runescape and well chill. Keep your head up bro. You can make it, I've got faith in you.

Emperador - February 14, 2017, 6:04 am

Haven't read the comments before me to be honest. The post is cringe (I hate this word)

Why shouldn't you?

Do you want people around you affected about this "tragic" incident? You really want your grandmother, grandad, mum, sister, dad, brother and aunt (your uncle's don't give a f*ck about you) crying for days? Waking up in the middle of the night missing you're self-centered selfish ass thinking why did you do it and what could have they done to prevent it?

I don't know you personally though, you could be raped by everyone in your family and wouldn't care less of what they would feel. Just wrote what popped into my mind when I thought why I shouldn't I kill myself for the sake of proving nothing.

KamVdekur - February 14, 2017, 6:06 am

I actually have thought of your question OP and all i could think was : we shouldn't kill ourself because life can be fun , the other reason is because our loved ones , our family , our passions . That's all i could think of , but still maybe because I am depressed like you I do not think the reasons I said are important and big enough.

Maybe because death is just nothingness and the fact you are willing to waste a valuable life that I'm sure many people around the world would want is just ridiculous. Why waste so many good memories and times being alive, because in the end, It's just nothing, ever, again. You're also doing a massive injustice to your family and you would be bringing more pain into the world, and towards your loved ones.

I like you Jesse, you seem like a great guy. Out of all the people who SHOULD kill themselves, you're not one of them. Life's a bitch mate, I know this. But it's better to pull through depression rather than kill yourself. For me at least, reason I never acted on my suicidal thoughts, is because once I kill myself it's over. The fear of killing myself before seeing if anything else happens is scary.

Life is all about the experience, we live one time and must fight our hardest as humans to escape any major problems like depression.

There's always a way out of a situation, things get rough in life but we can always fight through it, nothing that happens in life is worth killing yourself unless you have killed a bunch of people and are spending life in prison... then you should kill yourself but that's not the case here.

Nerdi - February 14, 2017, 12:47 pm

Because even if you look forward to death, the excitement and curiosity that comes with that notion is more fulfilling than death itself. My point being: even the most suicidal person is happier than a dead person. If you aren't religious, you believe nothing comes after death therefore neither can happiness, so a suicidal person is happier than a dead one. And if you're religious, you believe in an afterlife, but many religious texts suggest that suicide is a shortcut to Hell.

?ok3r - February 14, 2017, 1:24 pm

Because killing yourself is useless to do as something to satisfy your inner curiosity. Life is for the living, and life is where it's at right now. It's also where all the Muffins are at, so I would definitely stay alive if I were you.

On a more serious note, from my nihilistic view of the world, you should kill yourself if your life is shit. And if it isn't then don't kill yourself. Doesn't really matter whether you kill yourself or not, since you will die anyway.

However, it'll happen eventually with whatever you do- so I mean you could just wait for it.

But nah kill yourself.
