So I made this a while ago and wondering what your opinions on it.

Twitch Offline Screen (LARGE):

Spoiler (Click to View)

It's good, I like it.

Not sure what else I can add as criticism. It does feel slightly generic, like it's a design I've seen several times before, but it serves its purpose.

You can use [IMG=150x150] just change the dimensions.

It's a well put together offline screen. It's clean, to the point and there is correct emphasis on each separate element.

I'm assuming you made everything here custom?

Your general composition I would say needs some work. The greens seem a little out of place. When you're using things like logos you want the colors to be neutralized or to stand on their own as they were intended to help identify.

There is already blue in "Havoc" and the twitter logo, so I would have went with different shades of blue, or even teal, or violet as a compliment.

If you were going for an "NVG look" you could have gone more into that direction instead of taking it halfway.

Finally, the texture in "Havoc" doesn't match the background. When it comes to composition- not just colors, but texture is important to remain consistent. It helps the overall aesthetics.

I'm sure you'll get a lot of "good jobs", so the only way to give useful critique is to be picky. Good job.

Looks good!

Let me know if you ever decide to release the PSD.

Definitly keep doing what you do, you have some talent man.

Simple and clear. I like the greenish coloring.

Maybe I would add home letter spacing in the YT and TW account names and make the slash slightly transparent, so the name is more visible.
