Thread: [\[UPDATED\] Unresolvable Skype](#)

Kodaz - February 18, 2017, 2:23 pm

Hello everyone, I'm here because I was recently having trouble with skype resolvers being able to resolve me even while using a proxy. But yeah, I've found out the way to be unresolvable once again.

This is going to be a simple tutorial not going to make it HQ because it's not really needed. But yeah...

Download the older skype version from this link

<http://www.oldversion.com/windows/skype-7-16-0-102>

Once you downloaded and install it go to advanced -> connection and set it up like I have it.

<http://prntscr.com/eahl29>

Restart skype and wait around 30 mins or one hour and try to resolve yourself again. It worked for me so I don't see why it shouldn't work for you. Enjoy ?

Or just don't use Skype because they track you, and if you do have to use Skype, register with a VPN on and then use proxy settings.

I thought they made it so you can't resolve skype anymore?

Lol, this option is offered on the new skype versions as well.

Or just use skype for web, then you cannot get resolved.

For some reason the new skype version gets resolved... I've been testing all the versions trust me...

Have you tested skype for web?

Also make sure that you are only logged into skype on one device. Use /showplaces to make sure.

I have tried skype web and indeed it's a good way to remain unresolvable... But for people that prefer skype app they can check out my simple tutorial

Why would you even use Skype app?

There is no working downloadable skype resolver atm.. You can try skypegrab.net it works best.

Skype DEOB is also used for finding IPs via Skype, so your question doesn't make sense.

Are we talking about resolving IP's or something else?
