Thread: Unconfirmed bitcoin transaction

Maori - February 24, 2017, 3:47 pm

It's 3 days I've sent some bitcoins from a wallet to another, I was waiting for the confirmation but the blockchain of the transaction shows this message:

"Transaction rejected by our node. Reason: Transaction was previously accepted but has been pruned from our database."

I used Electrum and the fee was 0.000052... I know it's a very low fee, but it was setted automatically...

What can I do to unlock the transaction? Please help...

All you can do now is wait.

Take a look at the cryptocurrency section.

EDIT: Actually try this. <https://www.viabtc.com/tools/txaccelerator/>

Lately it happens, I've been waiting 48 hours for a transaction, you just have to wait.

Never happened to me before.

Long I've waited was like 30 - 60 minutes.

It happens to some people though, just play the waiting game.

It is because the price of btc is going insane so the network is clogged as a result. All you can do right now is wait, it'll confirm eventually.

It happened because it took too long for an confirmation, just be patient & up your fees next time.

Everyone's been having issues, I personally only send a 30 cent fee, and it took like 3 hours for 3 confirmations when there was 100,000 unconfirmed transactions.

It's 3 days I've been waiting... I will wait some more but I think this is very strange.

I will try that transaction accelerator. Thanks to everybody :)
