Thread: FreeDNS suspended my domain...lost all my clients!

FeeliNx - February 28, 2017, 12:24 am

It has been a while since my LuminosityLink server stopped connecting to my clients and I was wondering why is this happening since my ports are open but since I was about to format my system I let it pass....

So I have formatted my PC some days ago and just today I tried to login to my LuminosityLink to see whats wrong! After checking my DNS with the LL tool/option I found out that the DNS was the problem!

Went to FreeDNS's website and logged-in and saw this message:

Spoiler (Click to View) Account Locked : Records Frozen : Username: elitolf

Description : Account closed / 53.198.16.113:2666

Locked on : 02/22/2017 13:45:21 PST

Depending on the severity of the reason for your account's suspension, you may qualify for re-activation by setting up a premium membership. (This is true if you own multiple accounts, but you must contact an admin for restoration).

Do NOT setup more accounts, contact admin for assistance. Opening a new account will not help, as records inside of a frozen account are frozen systemwide until properly resolved.

Contact System Administrator at dnsadmin@afraid.org

So thats obviously means that i have lost all of my clients and this is fucking bullshit if you ask be....damn freedns service!

I would definetly suggest anyone using FreeDNS to change immediately to another DNS service if you dont wanna loose your clients soon or later!

End of the story, I will need a new free DNS service suggestion since all I have ever used is FreeDNS.afraid.org ... can you hit me up with some more trusted DNS?

And btw, Is it possible to spoof the DNS or something and get my clients back?

SavageAF - February 28, 2017, 12:27 am

Yeah did you just post your own ip?

SIM-2580909 - February 28, 2017, 12:52 am

Lol you posted your own IP and the port that you used for your RAT. HAHAHAHA

Thank me for teaching you a lesson

Yea i guess they can be....can i have some answer here?

Punkbastard - February 28, 2017, 2:22 am

Since you're using LuminosityLink, you're still having the chance to recover those clients.
LuminosityLink has a feature called HTTP Control:
<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4826868>
If you've set it up correctly you can update your DNS through HTTP commands.

I think that HTTP control would have to be setup before he lost his clients.

That's right, if it's not setup (correctly), there's probably no way to have his clients back, apart from FreeDNS unbanning his account ofcourse which will probably never happen.

I see guys...thank you all for your replies!! Any free vpn services suggestions?

Have you used up your free VPN trial you get with LuminosityLink?

On another note, I saw that you can setup your very own VPN with openVPN.

Should I use dynu.com ???

QU?CKSILVER - February 28, 2017, 6:27 am

Serves you right, all members were warned SOON ENOUGH about using sketchy DDNS services like this... Dynu free services will also fuck you up sooner or later, so please, buy your own domain.

And this is why you do your research and ask questions before you start in to this kind of stuff.

3/4 of this section could have told you to stay away from them, as well as a entire lot of other services.

Better luck next time.

you are pretty retarded...

1. you posted your own ip
2. ppl changed from freedns a long time ago

just buy a domain for like $0.50

RIP those clients.

Just wait till they get a malware report associated to the host, it will be gone in no time. OP bite the bullet and buy a domain or proper DNS service.

Naaa man, Grave digging is like what I saw the other day, someone replying to a thread from 2008 where virtually everyone in the thread was long closed. lol

This, this is more like a slight resurrection. ?

CKkio23 - July 17, 2017, 6:22 am

Is there a lesson to be learned here or not? @QuickSilver There are way worse Grave diggers out there.
