Thanks :), as for tips...A graphics tablet, a lot of focus/practice on mind and hand co-ordination for pressure sensitivity...and just a lot of practice aha. I still have a long way to go but I think I'm on the right track , coming from someone who's self taught

Resolution is way too small to be an album cover.

I think you should go with plain, 100% basic text, smaller too, so that it doesn't distract from the art itself.

As for the art, I like the organic, smokey, inkey effect and the trippy colours, however I would encourage you to up your production value. Spend more time on it, and add more details (not necessarily more elements, but more detail to the existing ones). For example, right now it looks like a rough sketch with a tablet and default brushes, try making it crisper, adding highlights and shadows - or if it's meant to be flat, then less blurry/rough.

The title looks a little small in my opinion. It's hard to see without looking for it.

Looks weird but in a good way. Keep it up !
