This user, current HF username; Electrode, asked me to exchange his paypal to my btc. He was supposed to send me $96 paypal for my $81.7 btc. I had a doubt. So, I split the deal in two parts
my $30 btc for his $30 pp
my $51.7 btc for his $66 pp

I sent him first $30 btc and he went offline. He came back after 24 hours and told me some excuses which I believed. Yeah, I know. That was stupid of me.

And he paid me only $29.5 paypal for my $30 btc and said that he would cover it in the next payment.

And then, I asked him not to go offline or wait for confirmation for btc payment and just send me paypal as soon as I send the money out of my wallet. I again sent him the remaining $51.7 btc and he just went offline after receiving the funds.

And since then he has been offline for about 72 hours and came back online yesterday and ignored all my PMs and made a new post.

This is a gif showing all the communications between me and him.

And this is the $29.5 payment he sent.

This is the btc transaction link for $30:

$51.7 btc sent:

I don't really understand blockchain site. So, If anyone wanna confirm the transactions this is his btc address.

And I can provide additional proofs, if needed.

Yeah, I just noticed that he has been scamming for long time. So, why is he still not banned? Does staff check this deal dispute section?

No staff does not intervene in deal disputes.

It's up to you to check out the user or use a trusted Mm.

At least it wasn't a large amount of money man ?

So, how does some scammers get banned?

TheLocker - March 8, 2017, 2:43 am

Bump. Scammer must get banned

Ultra Instinct - March 8, 2017, 2:27 pm

Scammers do not get banned.

Maybe 1 in a 100 if it's a massive scammer, but nothing will happen.

Talent . - March 8, 2017, 6:52 pm

Scammers do not get banned. Staff doesn't intervene.

Up to you to research who you deal with.

Always use a very well known Mm if you are unsure.

Sorry for your loss OP, that's sad

bomberboy - April 18, 2017, 8:25 am

Going to bump all deal disputes with Electrode. Seems like this guy continues to trade on HF without any problems and ignoring all members who scammed.

Someone do something with this guy!

Unexplained - February 1, 2019, 9:12 am

He's actively trying to exchange now.
