Thread: Is it considered socially acceptable to friend request current college classmates?

bdawn - March 10, 2017, 3:30 pm

So I'm taking a few classes at the moment and there are only a couple weeks until the quarter ends. I've done some group projects with some of my classmates and have gotten along with some of the people. They are pretty chill and I would like to keep in contact but its unlikely that we will ever have a class together again.

Would it be considered fine friend requesting them on facebook now or should I just wait until the quarter ends? I prefer to not sound like a "creeper" or make it awkward if they decide not to accept my request but at the same time, I don't want to make myself look bad by waiting until the quarter ends and make it look like I am stalking them.

What do you suggest I do? Note: There is only one or two guys I would friend request with everyone else in my group being girls ?

Kaleb - March 10, 2017, 3:31 pm

You're overthinking this homeboy. When I was still on Facebook basically everyone in my school just added each other regardless of if we even talked in real life lol. It's a social platform. go for it, if they think you're a creeper for adding them on facebook they're probably assholes anyways

Alright :P Most of the people I hangout with are at least in their 20s while these classmates are in their teens. I sometimes forget what is considered acceptable with my own age group xD

Egregious Jr. - March 10, 2017, 3:39 pm

Who gives a shit. In my school people friend each other even if they don't know you IRL.

Vibe - March 10, 2017, 3:41 pm

Just add them never know could be a great friendship

DataExhauster - March 10, 2017, 3:47 pm

This happens to me quite often where we do peer review or I meet someone in class and just based off my first name the day after I receive a friend request from them. I chuckle a bit but its only facebook after all. As the second poster said you're overthinking it abit test - March 10, 2017, 3:48 pm

Sure - I think you are overthinking it too much. I have friends on Facebook that are people I have never even met before back when I used to add every single person that was recommended. Just add them, they won't think anything of it.

Wompus - March 10, 2017, 4:00 pm

I'd see no problem in that, they're your classmates and it makes sense that you guys would be in contact...

Sure if you don't talk to them normally it may be a bit awkward. People from my college, not even in the same class as me, send me friend requests.

If you're lonely like me it's always nice to think that someone wants to atleast be connected with you ?

Bluffer - March 10, 2017, 4:05 pm

It would be fine, I got people on Facebook that I went to middle school with >5 years ago with and didn't really talk to at the time.

It's crazy watching people grow up.

big dick rick - March 10, 2017, 4:08 pm

are you seriously debating whether or not to send a fucking friend request

I laughed so hard lol. Haha.

AnonymousIII - March 10, 2017, 4:14 pm

I've found that when people I somewhat know from around campus add me, I don't think too much about how they found my profile. Probably just similar friends, that sort of thing. Just do it, it's not that big of a deal.

I think I'm going to shoot myself..with a nerf gun now ?????

GG123 - March 10, 2017, 4:51 pm

Why not.

My whole school practically has instagram, thats how you get to know everyone.

bdawn - March 10, 2017, 7:04 pm

LOL! I totally just got denied xD Oh well, guess people aren't into being friends with classmates.

Maybe they thought you looked too much like a school shooter and showed common traits of one.

Sorry to hear about your experience though. ?

Traum - March 11, 2017, 4:52 am

Dude, you're thinking too far. Just do it, if they don't accept then it is how it is.

Dabby Duck - March 11, 2017, 6:27 am idk I guess it kinda depends on the classmates

like I go to a community college so everyone just avoids talking to each other so that'd be creepy as fuck

Well damn, no wonder I got denied...I go to a smallish college ?

Edit: But we've been in the same class group for the past 9 weeks so its not like we don't talk...maybe she just doesn't like asians xD

Raf Simons - March 11, 2017, 3:05 pm

Yeah, don't do that.

Next time you're together, ask if they have any social media and if they tell you yes, ask to add each other. If they tell you no, they're lying because they're not interested. Don't get hurt over it, just keep it pushing.

Maybe it's because you tracked down her social media instead of just asking about it.

Well shit. ?

GG123 - March 12, 2017, 4:36 am

If you get declined, oh well whatever, life is life, we all move on at a certain point.

Kaiba Corp - March 12, 2017, 4:39 am

I think it's fine, I mean I added a girl right the next day after I met her and we are still friends...

Yup got friendzoned :(but it's fine I'll just find another fish.

Knucklez. - March 12, 2017, 4:44 am

Good point...

Damn you, stereotypes...

Prophet Banana - March 12, 2017, 2:30 pm

Are you serious man? Just friend request them.

I know retards who just say hi to you in the hallway and friend request you when they see your face in their "People you may know" box. You actually have classes with these people, done projects with them. You're actually acquainted with them.

Yeah right, I had people add me that I had no classes with. If you really see them a lot I wouldn't even think about what might happen if I send a request. Just do it, they'll add you.

TB12 - March 12, 2017, 3:57 pm

I know people have already answered this, but I literally see people add people that they don't even know. People in other states and shit. I know some people with over 1000 friends and they only know like under 100 of them. Like others have said, unless they are assholes, there shouldn't be a problem.
