

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Notorious - My 4 1/2 Testimony

No?orious - March 10, 2017, 9:49 pm

Introduction & Beginning:

I registered in November 2012 and I was 16. I was so naive, I remember searching for an Xbox Booter and stumbled across HF. It was a lot different back then but from looking at what I could possibly get my hands on and learn how to do, I had to make an account.

My Original Aim:

I remained in a 'lurking' state for a very long time, putting in my two cents every now and again on little things I had views on or subjects I wanted to talk about. However, I thought I would leave the majority of talking to the big boys, so to speak. I began learning the basics of hacking, it all started with getting my hands on that booter that I was initially searching for. I was still in school at the time and I was considered a wizard that I could turn off people's internet connections through Xbox, even computers on the same network at school with a command code you'd find on google. I loved it, even though I was praised for child's play, I continued to search around HF and pick up information where I could.

Progress:

After school ended that year, I started seeing that people were making money on HF, I was amazed that by staying at home I could possibly do this too. This point in time right here, became my greatest taking from HF, learning the value of money, which I will explain later on. Anyway, I began a Youtube Channel, the video was advertised and received 800k views, it was an easy almost 2k back then. I MADE MONEY ON THE INTERNET. This right here, drove me to wanting to succeed. I have since go through; CPA, e-Com, eBooks and more Youtube. It only lead to greater lessons and more money to start me off in the long run.

Hackforums impacting my real life: In a nutshell, I learned the value of money with hackforums. From those days where I made money online, I began planning what I wanted to save for, what I should invest on, how I should do it. The effort and time I put in to receive that $2,000 at 16, showed me how easy it is to spend and how hard it is to get. Since then, money and success was my aim. I completed highschool with great marks, decided against university and followed my own path. I began fulltime work at a warehouse, doing 42-60 hours a week. I went from a storeman to a team leader to a supervisor, to now having my own team of 10 people with the youngest being 4 years older than me. Long story short, HF put me out of the lazy gaming state I was in and pushed me to start young and reap the rewards later on. Today my offer for a house which will be my first investment property was accepted, I am only 20, I don't think many 20 year old's can say that. I have put 50% of the house down paid for, it is estimated it will be paid off and owned by me outright by the time i'm 24 with the assistance of renters. It sounds strange, but I believe from coming here and learning the value of money has brought me to this blessed stage I am at today. I lost a lot of mates because not having time didn't cut it, so I came on here just to talk and vent to people and I've found some good mates through my time here. As I said, it has been a real blessing.

Conclusion:

Hackforums has been a fantastic outlet for me. I started my hustle & grind here, I've come here to vent, bitch and offer my help. I've thoroughly enjoyed my time here and everything I have learned thus far. I look forward to contributing more often from now on with all my experiences. Thank you to Omni and all staff for keeping this site well maintained and running, without you guys it wouldn't be what it is. Thanks for reading this if you've got this far, it was really enjoyable to remember my journey. It's only upwards from here for me. I hope I can end up being a good resource in the money section of HF with investments and motivate others to do the same as I have.

Stay hustlin', I started my path from HF leading to investing in a house, anyone else can do it too! ?

Again, thanks for reading my story!

- ?Notorious