Thread: Add 'Correct Section' when reporting a thread as 'Wrong Forum'

severos - March 11, 2017, 2:46 am

Title says it all, when reporting a thread as 'Wrong Forum' isn't it better to have a 'Correct Section' as well.

Depending on the load of reported posts, this can make things a bit faster for admins, instead of having to view then select the section it can have a simple button to move it to the 'Correct Section' (no idea how the admin page look like but it might be useful for them).

Not really sure if it comes to use and if it's easily implemented.

It would require some time to set it all up. The current one is just fine, you shouldn't be posting in the wrong sections anyway.

Can be easily abused to confuse staff members.

Reporting can be easily abused to as well to overload the admin work, so if you abuse it you'll get a warning and other penalties.

I'll say it depends on how the admin panel works, I have no idea on that so thought of throwing the suggestion and let the admins decide if it's useful for them or not.

What I was told a while back, anything there isn't an option for, report as Low Quality. They will figure out if its suppose to be there or not.

There's an option to report as 'Wrong Forum', I'm suggesting an addition for it to save some of the admins work by allowing user to suggest what's the 'Correct Forum' is.

Staff who deal with such reports mostly know where does the thread fits in. So once you report, you shouldn't worry. :)

If there are no action taken/thread not moved over a day, just PM a staff member and ask em, waddup?
