Thread: [\[Community Feedback\] What IS the best RAT?](#)

Purple Kief - March 11, 2017, 3:42 pm

This is just a small experiment using community feedback. In this thread I take no sides, it's all the community.

You know all of those what's the best RAT threads? Yeah. I do too, they annoy me.

Here's my attempt at a simple fix, it's all upto you guys though. I will keep updating as long as the posts keep coming.

Post down below what you think the best RAT is and why. We will have a counter for every vote a RAT has, the most detailed reviews will be pinned to my original thread for others to read.

You can simply leave the name of the RAT if you so please, but this really does not help the community.

NOTE: Reviews will never be 100% accurate, everyone has their own opinion on which one they like more so unless you look at the actual code, there is no way to know.

Maybe this will confirm your choice, or make you do some research on another choice. Research is key in finding what you want.

Wet Rag - March 11, 2017, 3:43 pm

This is incredibly extra of you to post this.

You see what features they have and you compare to reviews.

You're really making this thread? Just let people pick what they want, each RAT will have people say it's the best.

But capitalize the C in NanoCore please, it triggers me.

I'm considering it, at the same time I can see community favorites turn really good RATs into 'unfavored' RATs.

At the same time if I can take out the undetailed 'what's the best RAT' threads and turn it into a semi useful one isn't that a good thing?

If you (or anyone) has something more to say about this experiment feel free to do so, it does not bother me to take it down.

@Cesar Fixed, lol.

You'll get like 20 replies here then it'll be on like the 3rd page and forgotten. It's a waste of time.

But if you're keeping it my recommendation goes to ctOS.

If comments stop I'll lock the thread and that'll be the end of it.

Apparently 80% of the buttons were just 'buttons' too.

I don't know how accurate that is though, I know there were a few.

NetWire is my favorite by far. Remco's looks interesting. Will be my next purchase.

Nick (Name) - March 11, 2017, 5:40 pm

I think HackForums is the best RAT, I mean Omni has control over all of its users, and it has amazing persistence, once one user gets removed it finds away back again! It's also the best RAT to get revenue off of, I have yet to see a RAT with a feature that takes in the dough than HackFourms. It also has logs previous IP's which can be great for tracking. HackForums can also group up users into groups which users pay for as well! I give HackForums a 5 star for the best RAT.

Id fucking rep you again if I could for this comment alone, lmao.

Meanwhile, Yo Kief, wheres the Poll brotha?

If your gonna do something do it right.

Comment was great, have to agree. Almost tempted to put it in a seperate category.

No poll though, maybe this way we could get even a small amount of input as to why.

Luminosity has been the best for me in terms of a good mix of stability and features. However I'd say Orcus takes the win because the product you paid for doesn't change on you all the time like LL does - and it has alot more features.

I vote for ramcos. Quality is expensive

THC - April 23, 2017, 12:28 pm

I think I have to vote for darkcomet, highly stable and secure. It is open source (As the source code has been leaked to various places) and most likely backdoored, so you are guaranteed a good experience.

Especially when the feds show up at your door!

Mirakuru - April 23, 2017, 4:57 pm

I vote for NetWire Workstation.

Armada - April 23, 2017, 8:05 pm

Why would you not actually make a poll???

C'mon man.... ?

I have a null vote, as my opinion would be well not productive being an owner of one of the RATs on the market.

bzr? - April 23, 2017, 8:18 pm

My vote goes to NanoCore Orcus.

THC - April 23, 2017, 8:20 pm

My serious vote does go to orcus though. The little time I had experimenting with both IM and Orcus led me to conclude that I liked orcus more.

Very stable

No dependencies

Have been around for a VERY long time

Constantly under development

Does not ban

Is there any other tool you know who is able read SQLite db without sqlite library?

It doesn't download or upload anything to recover opera/chrome/chromium passwords, but use own wrapper and read database in binary mode.

Native without dependencies, written in pure C using winsock without any additional packages and libraries

It isn't filled with useless functions/features, actually what is point of that? Every feature works perfectly fine.

Thats why I love Netwire! :)

How many times can I repeat this, I dont code, I know Networking, and all aspects towards THAT. Not programming, networking. Your argument is invalid as you constantly am charging at me for invalid shit I never ONCE claimed to do to start.

Remote ADMINISTRATION is more dependent on networking than the tools utilized. So you telling me my opinion is moot and based off of whether I like the developer or not, is simply fucking stupid.

The networking part is minimal. Simple TCP client with encrypted traffic. Of course you can make it more advanced and use key exchange algorithms to generate dynamic keys (Say Diffie-Hellman key exchange) but there is really no need.

On the other hand, the programming is extremely important as it determinees how the software/malware behaves. Is it coded properly? Does it have proper fallbacks incase something fails? Is it copy pasted? Is it runtime detected? Is it optimized?

You are the one talking out of your ass, and you have no expertise at all. You operate simple services that requires barely any tech expertise, therefore your opinion is worthless compared to that of programmers.

Oh you mean when one of my kids was educating themselves and spilled some scientific dye all over the place, yea well shit happens. At least he was learning and educating himself ONE HIS OWN instead of being a piss weasel online like yourself. But then against I guess my parenting is better than your parents. ?

AGAIN, provide the sample... what the fuck is so complex about this request?

You identify something potentially malicious, hand it to the developers to analyze.

I do not understand why you insist on trying to argue an obvious point other than trying to justify your own background intention.

You brought a new malware into the market, got it cracked, got it everywhere, and spawned a new troop of skids who abuse your tool and infect people on the internet.

Standard archive password for the transfer of malware (infected). Freshly discovered.

The server and shit was dead on inspection.

Even rechecked for 72 hours as well. as per policy. Server never came back online, as I said, you supplied a moot file to us.

Moot sample? You said it was not Orcus yourself even when it was. WTF is wrong with you? (Apr 3, 2017 11:12 PM)Armada Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) No Orcus markers found, so how is this my issue?

LAY OFF before I actually file a report against your dumb shit.

Final fucking warning.

Excuse me but it clearly is orcus thanks

Server might be dead, sample might be old, impossible to tell. But you yourself ignored it when it was initially reported, there, that is enough proof.

Just to let you know, since Luminosity's new update it is already considered as 'dying'.
Have added your vote to the thread though, thank you!

Netwire is a solid Rat, my review will not be that great because the only Rat i use in this selection is NetWire.

Netwire is stable and HQ - many features and great support.

AnonLiv3 - May 14, 2017, 10:18 am

ORCUS IS STABLE AND HQ FOR REAL THOUGH

Won't be adding the full review since Netwire is actually frowned upon as the RAT with the least features. (Not that it matters but it is true)

Added more points. :)

Yes, Netwire Workstation has basic features.

They don't plan adding some spying features like WebCam/Sound Capturing and fun features..

Imminent Monitor for sure

TheWarOwl - June 10, 2017, 10:28 pm

Nanocore's great, but Luminosity still wins my heart <3 (if you're still updating this anyways)

If you want my review it has pretty good stability, it's easy to setup - has unique features like quick connect (works a lot like teamviewer, but a link instead of an ID). It really depends on what you're looking for though, most people I work with though love quick connect and helps them feel comfortable when using unfamiliar software.

I'll keep updating it as long as reviews come in.

Thanks for the review, added it to the main thread.

Id like to see your proof to this, being I have seen the Orcus code myself. The only call home it has it to check for a valid license or not.

And it calls home to a server I configured and hardened myself....

Also had numerous very skilled penetration testers to analyze my configuration as well. No one could get in.
