What do you think will they actually wipe Phones and if how many are you guessing they are?

Regulus - March 21, 2017, 8:58 am

This should be interesting to see if they are bullshitting or not.

Thanks for the share :)

I've gotten hacked by someone on a carding site, and the email and password was my personal one where I've found zero databases on.

Thankfully he was kind enough not to format my phone.

Either way, you guys should change your passwords to be safe.

Mom - March 21, 2017, 9:03 am

Interesting, I'm not too worried, however, I want to see if they are actually going to be doing this.

Leroy Jethro Gibbs - March 21, 2017, 9:05 am

I think its bullshit to be honest. And if its not, so be it. I don't use icloud services since I'm an android fanboy. Good luck to those who might have their shit wiped!

I agree I am not that worried but still I think it would be safe to just change it anyways.

;). I like iPhones. I just don't like paying for things. On Android, I can at least root most of the phones I get and just use lucky patcher to get shit free. Beyond that, I think the simplistic and minimalist design of iPhones and other iDevices comes in handy for those who don't want a lot of customization or nonsense. I'm glad to see Apple slowing catching up to the game though. I will say one good thing about them is they don't have any new features until they are sure they work 100%. Unlike android where sometimes they will add a feature that ends up being buggy.

Antonsen - March 21, 2017, 12:14 pm

I don't think they will pay the hackers. Apple can hire hackers theirself and find out what the problem is in the system itself.

No war when one is obv open and free while the other is meant to enslave it's users.

Daddy???????????? - March 21, 2017, 12:18 pm

"$100,000 worth of iTunes gift cards"

Which is still only worth $75,000 to $80,000, so either way they want $75K

Not Your Average Orange - March 21, 2017, 2:51 pm

Can't Apple just force users to reset their passwords?

lalapwn - March 22, 2017, 1:42 am

I call it bullocks. And no, they wont fall for it. they ahev other things to care about Yea I think it is really wierd from them to request the giftcards. DONT you think they can just block the codes afterwards.

Yandere - March 23, 2017, 10:01 am

Interesting. Guess I'll reset my password to be safe.

scary hacker - March 23, 2017, 12:25 pm

Probably a bluff. Only time will tell.

gaming clips - March 26, 2017, 1:26 pm

I'm not sure if they are bluffing or not but doubt apple will negotiate with terrorists --- hackers* lol

yea if they get scared of so small blackmails and negotiate with them they will show that they are weak and others might try too so you are right I guess

Bubblez - March 27, 2017, 10:43 am

I'm glad I have never been a fan of apple products.

NowSeLLeRr - March 27, 2017, 10:03 pm

I think they got something well we see after 7 April.

NGMA - March 27, 2017, 10:07 pm

WSHH - March 27, 2017, 10:23 pm

Every Icloud account I have ever gotten into has nudes on it.

Not a single one didn't.

EDIT: maybe inb4 next iCloud nude leak from B class stars lel

smells like bullshit

99% fake, logging in some accounts does not mean they got access to the database

They could get access to old dumps

Reporter - March 28, 2017, 4:06 am

"According to one of the emails in the accessed account, the hackers claim to have access to over 300 million Apple email accounts, including those use @icloud and @me domains. However, the hackers appear to be inconsistent in their story; one of the hackers then claimed they had 559 million accounts in all. The hackers did not provide Motherboard with any of the supposedly stolen iCloud accounts to verify this claim, except those shown in the video."

LOL ????

joyboru - April 2, 2017, 10:46 am

I honestly want to see how this story develops. We already know Apple is flawed after previous events. They had made the decision not to cooperate for greater good based on "user's privacy". If they're not bluffing all this would prove to apple is not everything is gold in the cloud.

However, when you're running an empire you should have your own team of specialist to deal with these matters.

Vezh - April 2, 2017, 4:52 pm

all they got is old account infos. i would say they dumped the data out of the Pangu Database.. remember when you had to login to your account to install pangue on windows ? there might be the leak...

Mr. Robot - April 3, 2017, 5:16 am

Did you hear anything else about this?

Marv48 - April 7, 2017, 7:26 am

Hahah I think this is funny, people are crazy good for him if he gets some btc. Apple is such a target for the great deal of data they have from names, card info, finger prints, messages, passwords ect.

No news to this topic at all I am guessing this was just a hoax or pure bs of those guys. Could be I missed something tho but I dont think so.

f4gt - April 13, 2017, 2:35 am

Seems to be false threats and data from old breaches

PACKETSPPOSTSPUNKS - April 13, 2017, 2:38 am

Yeah this shit is false information. THeY just used leaksource to breach some icloud accounts and then bragged about breaching apple's security system.

Jund - April 16, 2017, 2:29 am

I dont think they will pay them. they wouldnt even unlock an iphone for the fbi
