

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Where can I find themes that doesn't fucking look like 99% of all WP themes

Moseby - March 23, 2017, 10:50 am

So I'm looking through ThemeForest etc.

But how the hell do I find something that doesn't look like everything else? EVERYTHING is 100% fullscreen, one-paged shit with all the same sections and crap.

Where can I find other kind of themes templates etc.?
What should I search for?

Pls

scary hacker - March 23, 2017, 10:58 am

You might want to consider commissioning a professional developer if public templates are not what you want.

focuss - March 23, 2017, 8:20 pm

Just get the theme and add content from scratch and make it look how you want it to instead of importing the demo data and just changing the info :)

gwoxie - March 24, 2017, 1:36 am

You might wanna use Avada. they got demos you can download and modify. They look quite decent. Atleast you got something to start with....

DarindAAAA - March 24, 2017, 2:00 am

I'd suggest to use visual composer, divi or tools like that to custom built up your theme, they're much easy to understand.

Rushax - March 24, 2017, 11:26 am

Find a Bootstrap HTML template you like the look of, that has multiple pages in with a nice design. Hire someone like me to convert it to WordPress & bam, custom designs made into professional & manageable website for anyone without any knowledge of coding.

RoyalCell - March 24, 2017, 11:30 am

What kind of page you need? If it isn't large and only blog-type you could easily code one or hire some one cheap

Eternal. - March 24, 2017, 11:50 am

Get a template and edit the shit out of it.

I personally like Tesla Themes, but if you can't find what you want on TF I don't think you will.

Check out Divi, haven't used it personally but it is said to be highly customizable.

deadsh0t - March 28, 2017, 4:17 am

Add extra css in the customizer so you make it different and more how you like that is ofcourse if you know how to use css else hire someone

