Thread: [\[\$5\] jEMPIRE PASTEBIN RC | NO CENTRAL COMMAND SERVER NEEDED | CONTROL FROM PASTEBIN](#)

FriendlyHugs - March 27, 2017, 11:36 pm

Eliminate the need for a central command server. Conventional methods of controlling bots include through IRC, HTTP, and direct TCP control with the use of a RAT such as LuminosityLink.

Pastebin RC (PBRC) removes the need for a central command server by allowing you to host your commands for free on the public service, Pastebin.com. This extremely stable bot runs on any computer regardless of operating system installed and has the following features:

Double-silent startup installation

Download/update/install

We are constantly developing this product. In fact, I just finished it today and wanted to release the barebones as a herding bot for a low price before upgrading it with more features. Here is a list of features already in development, soon to be released on the live builds:

Open an optionally hidden browser to visit a URL

Recover passwords and upload to Pastebin.com in a paste

SOCK5 proxy functionality with automatic uPnP port-forwarding

Because of the framework lacking functions for now, I've decided to release this at the low price of $5 per copy.

This comes with access to the private jEmpire forums reserved for customers only. Support will be provided by that avenue so fellow customers can answer whatever questions you may have as well.

IMHO this is a steal for $5.

Sort of. Very basic RAT. Let me scan a build.

VirusTotal is the only service I know that scans JARs. Nevermind, should be safe. LMAO, not detected at all.

If ever detected, will do my best to reFUD

Curious about how you are sending the pastes to the botmaster. Could you elaborate on that?
