I hate spending a lot on clothing. I just feel like there are so many more economical options out there than $100 t-shirts and $200 shoes.

I'm that guy that goes on a huge shopping spree during Old Navy's New Year's sales where everything's like 90% off and I can get 5 t-shirts for $10.

If you like big price tags on your clothing, good for you! It's your money, you should be able to spend it how you want!

Now of days everyones wearing that shit.

I don't see the point. Girls prefer guys looking nice without the gucci and the yeezys and shit much more anyways.

So I just don't see the point. I like the clothing..

But now like everyone wears it.. So there's nothing new..

And now it just makes you look like a wanna be..

I understand, I also have cheap clothing that I usually wear for daily things and laying around the house but for going out I like to dress nice that's when I will usually wear the expensive gear.

I feel you,

Moncler is pretty rare though forgot to mention drake wears this same jacket in the hotline bling video.

The most expensive thing I wear daily is my wristwatch, and even that is on the extremely cheaper end of fashion watches ($100).

Well, I shouldn't of really said Gucci..

Gucci's pretty chill actually, I was talking towards Supreme/Bape etc.

Whole different realm.

That's pretty iconic. I don't think I'd spend a lot of money on it, but I would sure wear the jacket for free or cheap just for some good laughs. ?

I have a few Louis Belts, but I prefer to be "lowkey" so to speak.. Literally every piece of underwear, shirt and socks are Polo lmao. Pants are Nudies or Truies but no thick stitch cause I'm white

Watches are a whole other game though..

Who Soup - April 3, 2017, 6:08 pm

I'd probably die from heat stroke if I wore that jacket where I live
