Thread: All Bans on bans.php

Leroy Jethro Gibbs - April 4, 2017, 3:47 am

This one is likely not to be added but I feel would be a decent feature for Ub3rs. I searched and didn't really find this exact suggestion so here it is.

My suggest is to have all bans show up on the bans.php page. Instead of just currently banned members, it would also list past bans as well for members that have been unbanned already. It would be pretty much a ban log. I've seen similar suggestions for profiles but I think the bans.php page is way better for a log if there was ever to be one added.

Any feedback is appreciated.

Omni recently limited it to the bans in the latest 72 hours.
Doubt this suggestion will go through.

NotoriousMoneyMaker - April 4, 2017, 3:49 am

I like your idea but don't you think this will take a shit ton of time? I mean, after every ban a staff member would have to update the banlog.

If thats the case then I doubt it too.

No, staff don't manually add anything to the bans page. When they ban a user, they get auto added to the bans page.

Could potentially work but I think it's unnecessary - you're not gonna need to know why someone was banned, I don't think it would be any of our concern. Ban/ban reasons from the last 72 hours seems reasonable enough.

Antonsen - April 4, 2017, 4:01 am

Are you talking about the same system that Nulled got? They have a ban page with IP's, e-mails included of users.

Nullled only gives out IP's and emails when they're closed, not when they're banned.

I think is a great idea to can see from the last week will be great! Or to can see all the bans! Let's see what the staff will decide about that!

I was just mucking around with you bro. I don't care whether you're a multi or not as long as you don't scam. But yeah, I saw that post you was referring to.

It was always set to show all bans. You dont even know bans can be autoadded, plead educate yourself a bit more about myBB before you give your opinion here.

TRH4CK - April 4, 2017, 4:52 am

It was recently changed to 72 hours. But I do find this suggestion a good idea too, sometimes you are looking for someone banned and since their ban occurred in more than the last 72 hours, it would just not show up...!

I'd like to see what unbanned members were originally banned for. But I'm glad someone else has an opinion to add to this. Thanks man.

Elitas - April 4, 2017, 5:27 am

This would be a good addition to a trust scan. Something like "number of times banned".

Charger - April 4, 2017, 5:49 am

Somebody made a user script that scraped it and as a result it got changed.

Xeenon - April 4, 2017, 7:37 am

If you want to know why someone has been closed outside the 72-hour limit, then just check their trust scan. The trust scan feature already provides the feature you are looking for. Sure, you can't see a wall of users in the past six years, why they have been closed and other information. You would never need to know, nor have a list of EVERYONE. If you really want to know why someone was closed, then just check that individual's trust scan.

Example: <https://hackforums.net/trustscan.php?uid=3122746>

Reason Closed: Multiple Accounts

TRH4CK - April 4, 2017, 7:42 am

@Lookin: Seems to show closed ones only actually, not bans..!

Nonetheless, I highly doubt Omniscient will add this - he removed it due to someone pissing him off, so I doubt he is going to add the ability to see all bans back.

Adam. ?

Vitani - April 4, 2017, 11:38 am

I am almost sure Omniscient is going to deny this based on the recent implementation of the /ban.php 72 hour limitation.

That being said, something like this would actually be one of the features I would actively use and enjoy.

Cammy - April 4, 2017, 11:52 am

All bans from last 6 months would be awesome if omni would put it back to that old setting i really miss it

THC - April 4, 2017, 12:03 pm

I would enjoy that feature. Would be cool to see all the active bans.

Omni just now randomly had a problem with it and changed it to only show the last 72 hours.

I didn't do it.

It definitely wasn't random.

They're just pulled from the database. There is already a "ban log", which is bans.php, but it only goes back 72 hours. If each entry was added manually I think that limitation would be more work.

Showing all bans ever would require putting effort into paginating the entries, and honestly I don't even understand why we can see any of them in the first place. Maybe the duration of the ban, but the reason is typically irrelevant as serious offenses will get you a permanent ban, and temporary bans mostly happen because of warnings or bad behaviour (In this case the user would have terrible reputation and wouldn't cause an issue in the market place for anyone who'd check the ban reason in the first place).

(Apr 4, 2017 06:32 PM)xadamxk Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If Omni adds Bans.php to the HF API, it would prevent the need to use userscripts that load content in the background.

There is no need. I have some userscripts for myself, none of them make requests, but they're still handy (Such as preventing a junk-split on OPs).

J?son - April 4, 2017, 7:28 pm

how about a bans database we can search
