Hack Forums Theme | Minimalism & Flat

Thank you for stopping by. I originally made this theme for myself, but I might as well share it. I tried to go for a soft and relaxing interface for the eye, you should not be bothered with a too strong color or a too dark, this one is just in the middle. This theme is only edited by its css-files, that means no html or javascript. The structure is the same as the original theme, it just has been edited into a dark theme.

Previews: Index.php

How to install the theme:

Install Tampermonkey (Chrome) or Tampermonkey (Firefox)
Then click here to install the theme

If you decide to use it, please post below to let me know.
Thanks to iHydra and xadamxk for showing me the ways.

Looks good, Just the background and color change.

Smexy - April 7, 2017, 9:37 am

Oh my god, thats so cute.

I want to adopt it.

Edit: if you click the edit button, the options are blue.

And my buttons are still a little bit purple.

I am aware, thanks. I am still working on it, just released it earlier because many wanted it.

Will try to fix it as soon as possible.

What about some love to Firefox users :(?

Nevermind, Tampermonkey works on Firefox too

But I don't think it's the official add-on from Chrome

Looks nice, however I'm not sure I'm in love with the home buttons growing on click, makes it feel less seamless than a color change.

Loving the theme!

I see, it does not apply to the other buttons. Appreciate you reporting.

This is kind of the thing with early release, fixing small things. So when the theme is fully finished I will make sure to let people know to update to the finished version.

Thanks!

WuTangClan - April 7, 2017, 11:49 am

I'm using this theme and I like it a lot mate.

Franklin Clinton - April 7, 2017, 12:16 pm

Cold Hearted - April 7, 2017, 12:18 pm

When I go onto a different page it flashes the old theme before applying the new theme, meant to happen?

Leroy Jethro Gibbs - April 7, 2017, 12:22 pm

Quick quotes are still purple but other than that, it looks hella good.

Yes, this is a userscript and not something built in the site. Considering that the only thing I have edited is the global css files, I might pm Omniscient to see if he wants to add this as a third option for themes on-site. We'll see.

Pretty sure that you are talking about themes that Omniscient has implanted on the site then? Such as purple and blue.

Or?

Nah, you're right. Like 99% sure you can't fix it. Any other script I've used does this also.

Right! It's a userscript, addon on a site, it has to take time to load.

Not sure of the name as this was at least 5-6 months ago.

it was similar to this one though, that's all I know.

Ay cheers. Remember that this is in beta, there will be updates here and there and they are not automatic, you have to visit the same download link and update from there.

Because you're on crack, didn't notice, don't remember, had better connection, etc.

The fact that you can't even remember what it was proves my point, it was a long time ago. If you knew how userscripts worked you'd understand that they load on top of the actual site so regardless of how "instantaneous" it was, you can't get around it. But I mean, yeh man. If you found the miracle script, kudos to you.

OP can't fix this, but it's fine because it's barely even noticeable. Unless I'm really looking, I can't even tell.

M?xim - April 7, 2017, 11:41 pm

Will be fixing the "Q+" button today along with quick quote. There's still some buttons that has a blue border as well. If there's more, let me know!

It is just that "Q+" button, for some reason it is in the html code and not css.

Planning on keeping all :hover as original, which is blue. Thoughts?
