Whilst this might seem really useful, it's been released multiple times here and the last time if my memory serves me well was over a month ago.

Just because a tiger escapes from a zoo, doesn't mean it's available to pet in my house :)

You're obviously lost. These tools leaked in 2013 but were in a protected archive. The password to it was released today or yesterday. The repo is real the tools are real its all open source you can read it yourself its not OP trying yo RAT you.

Its not serious because you made it that way and discouraged people from believing OP even though its all real.

I'm not arguing whether or not it was released lmao. I'm saying you shouldn't download shit from randoms posting things in the lounge, which isn't even the correct section for hacking tools.

Its a repo not some exe download....

Not to mention if you would have looked into it you would have realized this is the real deal.

Okay ;) go ahead and go hack the internet with these NSA hacking tools. Get back to me once it's done.

You even neg repped OP for posting 100% real tools. And if you would do even minor research you 1) would have realized that the tools he posted are real and have been linked by multiple credible sources 2) realized there is no claim that you can 'hack the internet' using these tools but there is some interesting applications and exploits within it.

Way to prove your ignorance man and then double down on it when you're proven wrong.
