Thread: MyAltCoins.net | Easily Track and Share your Investments and Profits with others!

Cryptic™ - April 17, 2017, 4:56 am

I started investing a lot in AltCoins a couple of weeks ago and have been using Excel to track my earnings

Only issue with that was I'd have to manually update the current value of the coins I invest in and I could only do that when I'm on a PC.

I post screenshots of my investments on HF all the time and at least 20 people have contacted me over the past few weeks asking me for my Excel file

I had nothing to do at work this weekend so instead of watching Netflix all night I decided to make a site to do exactly what I want.

Yes I know there are tons of sites/app that do this, but they have a lot of crap I don't want or are too complicated or cluttered or I just don't like them.

Best part about it is, it's simple, very minimalistic and if I want to share my portfolio with someone I no longer have to take screenshots, I can share a link with them and they can see my earnings anytime in realtime.

Here's a link to my Portfolio: <https://myaltcoins.net/view.php?u=1>

If you want to check it out you can register for the site here
<https://myaltcoins.net/register.php>

FAQ:

How do I enable sharing?

Sharing is disabled by default. You can enable it by going to your profile settings by clicking on settings in the top left corner.

How do I edit my investment?

Click on the date, it will take you to a page where you can make modifications.

How often does the site update it's data

We pull data directly from CoinMarketCap.com every minute. If the coin is on CoinMarketCap, then we have it.

Why is USD the only option? What if I used BTC to purchase my Altcoins?

This is a very controversial thing and different people have different opinions. The way I look at it is, if I used BTC to buy a certain coin. I would write down the value of the BTC at the time. Why? Because USD never changes, and BTC always fluctuate.

Example:

If you bought $600 worth of a coin with BTC when BTC was $1200 each and all of a sudden the BTC value drastically dropped and you need to cash out. Yes you have will end up with more bitcoins than you initially invested but your losing money as the value of BTC is much lower than the value was when you initially invested. You think you gained more, but in reality, you lost money.

If you have any questions or concerns let me know. :)

I've invested in BTC all my life how do I use USD?

Example:

If I bought 744 ETH for 23 BTC when 1 BTC was worth $1230 each.

To find my cost per coin I would have to do the following

$(23 \times 1230) / 744$ which is \$38.0241935484 per ETH.

So on my site you would enter

Amount: 744

Cost Per Coin: 38.0241935484

Basically $(\text{totalcost} / \text{totalAmountofCoinsIBought})$

If you are not sure how much BTC was worth at the time of an investment you made in the past, go to <http://coinmarketcap.com/currencies/bitcoin/> and look at the graph and go to the date you bought your coin.

If you want to be added to the list below, enable sharing on your profile and post your share link in this thread.

Yes I know. As mentioned in my thread, I've tried various apps/sites before but never really liked them so I went out and made my own solution to my liking.

Has exactly all the information I need without all the extra gunk. :)

Also keep in mind, running an app takes up space on your phone and will kill more battery than having a tab in your phones browser open all the time. :)

For people using BTC for purchasing (like me), if you invest like 1.00btc, just write 100$, 1.59btc = 159$ etc, the results are exactly the same apart from the "$" sign.

Otherwise that's a great share, blockfolio is too bloated for my liking.

If you could add a tab with something like <http://redditbot.com/tools/profit.php> in the future, it will be even greater. ?

Edit: forgot what i said, i misunderstood, the site use the $ value for the coin value so it won't work.

:p

I've just been working on coding the site for the past 2 days coding all the functions and logic I'd like to keep as the portfolio page and view page as minimal as possible.

I'll look into having a better home/landing page made though so people get a better idea of what the site is about just by visiting it.

(Apr 17, 2017 05:31 AM)boo5t Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'll be signing up here in a few hours. Love that it's in USD as well.

The site is currently running on shared hosting, and they limit the amount of resources I could use so I can't run large amounts of SQL queries at a time. I'll be moving it over to it's own VPS later this week so I can go full throttle.

After that I'll be adding the following currencies so more international people can use it.

"AUD", "BRL", "CAD", "CHF", "CNY", "EUR", "GBP", "HKD", "IDR", "INR", "JPY", "KRW", "MXN", "RUB"

CoinMarketCap only offers those currencies so that is what I'm limited to.

I had to teach someone earlier today how to use USD as they have tracked earnings in pure BTC all their life.

Example:

If I bought 744 ETH for 23 BTC when 1 BTC was worth $1230 each.

To find my cost per coin I would have to do the following

$(23 \times 1230) / 744$ which is \$38.0241935484 per ETH.

So on my site you would enter

Amount: 744

Cost Per Coin: 38.0241935484

Basically (totalcost/totalAmountofCoinsIBought)

If you are not sure how much BTC was worth at the time of an investment you made in the past, go to <http://coinmarketcap.com/currencies/bitcoin/> and look at the graph and go to the date you bought your coin.

In regards to <http://redditbot.com/tools/profit.php> why do I need to link that, that's literally what my site does, just better.

Yeah definitely. I was planning on adding a toggle between USD and BTC.

So there could be two use cases.

FIAT Usecase:

I invested $100.

Each Asset was worth: $0.01

Each Asset is now worth: $0.03

I now have $300

$200 Profit

BTC UseCase:

I invested 1 BTC

Each Asset was worth: 0.0003 BTC

Each Asset is now worth: 0.01 BTC

I now have 33.3333333333 BTC

32.3333333333 BTC Profit

I think that you should alter the system to base it off of transactions. Currently, you need to delete an investment whenever you sell and you lose those records.

SIM-2562043 - April 17, 2017, 6:38 am

I've been using - <https://cryptofolio.info/> but so many coins aren't on it. Hopefully it is different on your site.

Would it be possible to automatically fetch data from Poloniex/Bittrex API? That would be perfect.

Awesome man just signed up. Used to have a notepad with my earnings :) Calculating it every day by hand.

Would you mind adding the ability to have multiple currencies? I am Australian for example, so where you have "Profit" maybe you could have "Profit - USD" then next to it "Profit - AUD" or whatever your member wants to use?

Think about it ;)

I was thinking about that last night. But the issue with that is.

Lets say someone buys 100 ETH at $35 a coin.

Then they decide to sell 20 of them when it's $27.

So I can't use the same dataset for both the "live" portfolio that tracks your earnings in real time, and the "history", things would get messy.

If people want to record their profits when they sell, I could make a new table in the database for people to store transcatons and let people add records there.

They'd have to fill out what they bought it for and what they sold it for.

If you guys want a "ledger" of the coins you sold to track your profits, then I am happy to implement it.

Maybe in the future. But not anytime soon.

Right now I just use CoinMarketCap as it's the "go-to" place to monitor prices of coins as it aggregates it from tons of sources and then averages it out.

I don't plan on adding BTC as a default currency because it would confuse a lot of people and by keeping everything in USD its easy to see profits and losses.

What do you mean date of each investment to stop resetting? If you need to modify a date you can edit the investment by clicking on the date.

Nah. BTC values fluctuate a lot so tracking profits in BTC value is useless

If you invested 1 BTC for 1000 of some coin. Next day BTC becomes $2000 each but that price stays the same. Then your 1 BTC is now worth 0.5 BTC.

So you'd see a growth of negative 50%.

That's why you use track profits in USD

CoinMarketCap provides an average of the prices coin from a variety of different exchanges..

2800 Satoshi = 0.0340989320 USD

2810 Satoshi = 0.0342211635 USD

A difference of about $0.0001222315. When your talking about dollars nothing after 2 decimal places really matter.

Second of all, these type of sites are just to give you an idea of how your investments are doing....

Lil' question:

Why do the dollar numbers have so much decimals? (i dont know if decimals is a genuine english word ? but i mean the numbers behind the " , ")

Why not limit that to 2 numbers? I, for example:

Yesterdays balance:	2 flipflopcoin equals 1.253 dollar
Todays balance:	2 flipflopcoins equals 1.254 dollar

I really dont care that I made 0.001 dollar cents more today.
Get what I'm saying?

I got a suggestion add a feature where you can add when you withdraw the coins for example if buy 1 coin and then the value goes up to $10 per coin so my profit it $10 then if i withdraw it it should my profit would stick to when withdrew it. So if the coin goes down to $5 my profit is still $10.

I'm not very good at explaining..

Was thinking about this too ?

Or maybe a checkbox that you can click when you cashout. So all numbers filled in will stay the same from the moment you clicked the checkbox, and you total profit (or loss for that matter) too.

You may not care but a lot of people do.

On top of that it matters for coins that have really small values. I'll look into making it a setting as to how much numbers you want to see. So u can choose between two decimal places or the whole amount

A ledger is going to be added so that when you sell coins you can add what you bought it for and what you sold it for there.

So u keep track of all your actual profits.

Also next week I'm going to implement Ajax/jquery so values update live on the page instead of you having to refresh the page to see updated values.

Click on the date.

I don't really want to add a column that says edit as it would just make it look bad.

But a lot of people don't realize they can click on the date. It's a hyperlink for a reason.

Not sure how to make it more obvious without adding an edit column.

Not to bash this or anything, but I do not understand why people do not simply make an excel workbook for this. (I can make one and just release it... Taking my MOS certification exam tomorrow.)

I also didn't see a way of editing the input once entered, so once you put on your history, it's permanently there.

I guess it is kind of nice that it finds the current value...

Don't put in commas when inserting numbers, no idea why people do that. I guess I should add it to the sanitization filter to strip commas from input for people that do use commas....its been added to my to-do list.

If you want numbers to display with commas I suppose I could add that it looks nicer.

Second of all, if you read the op to you would have seen the whole reason the site was made was so I wouldn't have to manually update my Excel file. Lol

Also if you want to edit you click the date. It's been stated multiple times throughout the thread.

Also add a calculator for the supply vs market cap (I mean if the coin value is 5 and there is 1000 available supply the market cap is 5000) so you pick the coin and enter the value and it automatically generate the market cap if the coin os at the price you entered.

The plan is to be able to input what exchange you bought what coin for.

For example

If I bought 20 ETH for $30 each from Poloniex, my current investment value and profit would be calculated based on the current ETH rates from Poloniex.

If I bought another 30 ETH from Bittrex for $35 each, my current investment value and profit would be calculated based on the current ETH from from Bittrex..

And for the summaries, we would just add all of those values together.

So we wouldn't be using CoinMarketCap anymore, all data for each investment would be obtained from the exchange you bought those coins from.

That way everything is 100% accurate

You'll be able to specify which exchange you bought each coin from and see prices based on that exchange.

The values will also update live on the page so you no longer have to refresh to see updates.

Lots of exciting features coming.

After we get all the above done, which will be sometime this week, we will work on implementing PUSH/Email notifications later on so that you can get alerted as soon as your coin hits a certain price of your choice.

And also the ability to be able to import your investments directly from exchanges such as Poloniex
Yes, yes, yes!

Having to compare Poloniex's exchange on CMC was a hassle, LOVE THIS!

Well I am having an issue with mine.

<https://i.cyrex.io/AHFpZ.png>

If you look at the second one, $24 profit is apparently 118% growth from a $133 investment? I am guessing it is meant to be 18%.

Thanks for pointing it out, please check now, I've adjusted the code to correctly display that as I understand how it can throw people off. And in the future please provide a link to your portfolio.

118% is technically correct but for investments that have ~>100 & <200 growth I've adjusted it so it'll now show 18% or whatever.

And just FYI

$133.120834 * 1.1878 = 158.120926625$?

It's too new of a coin only on one exchange right now.

Once its listed on CoinMarketCap it'll automatically show up.

We are adding poloniex and a couple of other big exchanges in the next update of the site.

Yup, it'd help a ton for users who also want to use the price per BTC as I prefer the BTC profit amount.

Suggestion: Add a box for price of the coin in BTC. User could choose either $ or BTC or use BOTH (if its not too much trouble) for this.

making these tittles clickable

Date Coin # of Coins Cost per Coin Spent Current Price per Coin Current Investment

so it shows highest and lowest when clicked

Then maybe a "holding tab" "sold tab"

so you can see profit you made/lost and can see what you are making/losing

On the to-do list. Were going to use a different table framework. Those improvements will be made after the improvements I mention below are implemented.

Already coded. See below. Will be released later this week.

Updates that will be rolled out this week:

- When adding investments, you will be able to choose the exchange you purchased each coin from so each investment will display the profits and stuff based on rates from that exchange.
 - You will be able to select the source you want your Portfolios Overall USD calculated from (like how preev lets you select the source) and all investments will display USD values based on that source.
 - Instead of having a huge dropdown list for all the coins you can choose from, you will be able to type in coin names and the list will auto populate like how you can search for coins on CoinMarketCap.
 - A personal ledger will be added so you can record when you sell coins and keep track of how much profit you are making.
 - When viewing someones Portfolio or viewing your own portfolio you will be able to toggle between having $ values rounded to 2 demical places or if you want to see all decimal places.
- Many other minor changes/improvements are coming as well.

Edit: Also forgot to mention, you will no longer have to keep refreshing the page to see updates. Once the updates are released, values on your portfolio will update in real time kinda like <http://bitcoinwisdom.com/> , no need to refresh page. :)

Do You Want To Bet - May 7, 2017, 11:11 pm

for sure man my f5 can use the break.

sounds like you are excited about the project hope you continue it

Laski - May 7, 2017, 11:35 pm

Some tips:

- Add a "+" for all profits since you already have a "-" for all losses.
- Make all profits green since losses are already red.
- Add a universal favicon just for better appearance.

Cryptic™ - May 8, 2017, 10:43 am

Thanks for the suggestions Laski we will take them into consideration.

Some other changes were making.

A lot of people have requested that we support adding "BTC" investments instead of having to convert to USD so we found a way to make it super easy to track your FIAT profits even if you are entering BTC.

As mentioned earlier you will be able to choose the source of USD values for your portfolio in your settings instead of being forced to use CoinMarketCap which we use now.

And there will no longer be a huge dropdown menu when selecting your coins, you will be able to type in the coin you want to add and it will auto populate the list like how CoinMarketCap does it so beautifully.

p.s. "Exchange for fiat prices" will be renamed to something more elegant like Default Currency or something.

And it will support multiple currencies like USD CAD GBP etc, tons of currencies. Almost like what preev has.

Again, a big thank you to Inverion he is working on finalizing most of the updates.

At first I wanted to add something like that where there would be a page that had a list of the richest investors, but then a lot of people would abuse it by entering fake data making them appear at the top so they look "cool".

So I decided against that.

Sharing is meant for sharing with your friends or people on forums that you are involved in. This way, people wont be motivated to enter fake data so they appear at the top of a "high scores" page.

Updating image is on the to-do list. If someone wants to help create a template/design for it, it

Most invested coin, great idea.

Most profitable coin also a great idea.

API call for json data on user is possible but what would ppl use that for? Integrating it into their own apps/sites?

Hey guys!

By popular demand, the Ledger has been released. You can now keep track of what you sold.

If there are any bugs please report them immediately.

More updates to come over the next couple of days.

You can only see a users Ledger if they have sharing enabled on their account and if there are any entries in their ledger

Are there any reported issues with Myaltcoin speed, it's always around 5-15 minutes behind real time prices which isnt great to help see margin in live real time.

Rates are from CoinMarketCap.com and are updated every minute.

We will be adding poloniex and a bunch of other exchanges and will update data every 15-30 seconds. We were supposed to release today but came across a stability issue that should be fixed by tomorrow.

Time to write up a quick FAQ for the site.

I also want to implement adding BTC investments so I may get that done tonight as well.

Yes and yes. Charts will definately be added and CSV imports from poloniex will be added as well in the near future.

We plan on adding the feature to automatically add your poloniex buys/sells. It will require you to enter your poloniex api detail so our servers can monitor your buys/sells and add them to MyAltCoins automatically.

Hey man maybe I'm going crazy and can't math for some reason but look at this:

<https://myaltcoins.net/view.php?u=30>

As you can see, for most coins I've invested ~$200. Let's call it $200 for the following coins and do some drastic rounding for easy math:

You can see I tossed $200 into DGB. At the time of writing I have ~$400 worth of DGB, giving me a growth of +100%. However, the page is displaying +200%

Yet I also bought $200 of EXP. I now have $350 EXP, giving me a growth rate of +75%, which the page accurately displays. But once it goes up to $400 I think it will jump from 99% to 200%. You appear to not have a 100%-200%. Weird bug. Or I'm terribly misunderstanding something, which I suspect since no one else has called this out.

When a value is 100 something I subtract 100 from it because people were complaining about it a few pages back.

So +199% would display 99%

I will most likely change it back but +199% isn't being displayed as 99%, instead 100% is being displayed as 200%

i think you're mixing up a few things. My $200 DGB is now $400 DGB. My current value is therefore 200% the value of my initial investment, but my growth is only 100%, which you display as 200%. But on sub $100 items, you display it accurately. I think you meant to show value but labeled your column as growth and that's likely the cause of the initial confusion

Cryptic™ - May 16, 2017, 2:22 pm

Your DGB investment

$480.36/238.661029 = 2.01272910794 \quad 100 = 201.272910794\%$

Your EXP

$359.6/199.316765 = 1.80416333769 \quad 100 = 180.416333769\%$

Page displays 80.41% because 100 gets subtracted for 100-199

Can you add a "fake" investment so I can see what the issue is?

Edit: I just read the code, if its greater than 100 and less than 200 it will sub 100.

We've been planning on releasing it but it gets delayed each time because we find something else to improve so we decided to do one giant roll out.

Completely redesigned site and lots of new features. Were aiming for before next Tuesday so it can be included in the 3rd edition of the Crypto Sector news.

You have total invested, current value and current profit.

What about "Current ROI: x%"?

Easier to read and really shows off how well you predicted things, no matter the budget.

Its fine if not.

BAT is listed on CoinMarketCap so it should show up automatically.

CoinMarketCap has been going online and offline all day but it is on there now.

It's listed as BatCoin.

Is BAT listed on CoinMarketCap?
It's down right now so I can't check.

If it is, it will populate on MyAltCoins automatically once CoinMarketCap gets online.

Also instead of making so you have to sell all your coins, can we get the option that we sold part of our investments? I've sold a few things from each investment but the only option says I've sold all my investment for $x.

Partial selling will be added.

In regards to BAT the issue is both coins have the same abbreviation which is why it was only adding one.

Kind of odd why they would give two coins the same abbreviation...

I'll have that fixed in a bit.

Edit: I have adjusted the script that syncs with coinmarketcap so the issue should be resolved. We just need CoinMarketCap to sort their stuff out and get their site online...

Update: There we go BAT is now listed.

It's due to CoinMarketCap's API constantly going offline all day

<https://api.coinmarketcap.com/v1/ticker/>

It's still offline.

Right now the site solely relies on CoinMarketCap for data.

After the large update tomorrow we will have data directly from multiple exchanges.

I'm going to close this thread for now as I don't want it constantly bumped.

I'll re-open it after we roll out the large updates over the next 48 hours and make everything much better.

Cryptic™ - November 11, 2017, 9:20 pm

Your investments are still fine. All the data is still there, you just can't see it.

There is something wrong with the CoinMarketCap API and I am investigating.

I was out the past few hours I just got home. Looking into everything now.

Edit: Fixed. CoinMarketCap made a change to their API which required me to make some modifications on my end.

The site isn't going anywhere. I'm busy with university now but I do plan on updating it eventually.

For now it's just a simple easy to use Portfolio tracker.

Cryptic™ - November 13, 2017, 10:45 am

All the missing coins have been fixed.

CoinMarketCap made some more changes.

Before I'd grab all the data from <https://api.coinmarketcap.com/v1/> but now that only shows the top 100 coins.

They require you to use <https://api.coinmarketcap.com/v1/ticker/?limit=0> to get all coins.

Adjustments have been made and it's all sorted out now.

Let me know if anything else has to be looked into. I'll be monitoring it for the next few hours.

I have 2 requests. Is there any chance you can add in a feature or a note or something so we can put in where the currency is held? For example. I use myaltcoins to track everything and i love it but i sometimes forget where my coins are. wallets, exchanges etc. A small note beside the coin in which we can add where the coin is would be great. It would be private ofcourse

Also. Can we round the decimals points to like 4 max? I have some numbers like 2.4050343619902 and it makes everything ugly

Thanks

I'll add an option in the settings to round numbers to 4 decimal places for users that want it.

Note feature will be added too.

This is just a product I contribute to in my spare time.

MrJamieMcC - December 30, 2017, 6:10 am

I love it. I think its a great product! It's very useful. Another idea would maybe have a feed of coins and there prices as well as maybe some crypto news or something?

EDIT 1: Also for Stellar Lumens can you make the abbreviation be "STR/XLM" as it goes by two names

EDIT 2: Another small feature which would be good imo. It would be good if there was a total at the bottom labelled "Actual $ Investment". The total of your actual money you have put into crypto. For example on my profile <https://myaltcoins.net/view.php?u=291> the total invested says $594.341548 where in actual fact i have only invested around $130 of my own money. I have re-invested my profits. Maybe a label for actual investment and re-invested investments or something like that?

Your site is amazing! Would it be possible to request for account management features e.g. updating the username and email? If that's too much work, will a delete feature (so, you sign up again with the new details) take less time?

Cryptic™ - March 23, 2018, 4:01 pm

This project is going to shut down on April 30th, there are currently ~ 600 users that use the site actively which is why I am giving a month notice so people can transfer their portfolios over to somewhere else.

This is a project I started and learned a lot from, but I no longer have time to continue developing it, in fact, I have not touched the code in months.

I highly recommend <https://getdelta.io/> it's the best Portfolio tracker in the market and highly advanced.

I will be open-sourcing this project though on GitHub after I retire the site so people can use the code as a base for things in the future.

The domain WILL NOT be for sale as I may use it for projects in the future.
