Thread: UB3R Permanently Denied Reset

Omniscient - April 19, 2017, 11:41 am

In a show of good-faith for our 10th Anniversary I have reset all permanently denied Ub3r as just denied. This does not mean they are approved, but instead it means they can apply again. In most cases they can expect to get permanently denied again. Trust Scan will show them as "Denied" now.

Enjoy.

EDIT: Suggestion to those applying again. Do your best to clean up your reputation and have a consistent IP history. Nothing you can do about previous warnings but the more in the past they are the better.

Reporter - April 19, 2017, 11:42 am

This is amazing news, thanks a lot!

I have no idea why I got denied but I will make sure to apply later (A lot later)

Gt403cyl - April 19, 2017, 12:06 pm

This may be a silly question, for those that very recently were denied, were the waiting periods also reset?

For example, a member who was denied less than 7 days ago would have to wait the waiting period before applying again.

It does not affect me just a curiosity.

LOOL, I can tell you took the 'perm denied' seriously.. Look at how many awards you have.

A lot of us got permanently denied ub3r for literally for no reason.

Since we don't have to be given a reason for being permanently denied, we'd never know if it was due to how long we've been on the forum, or the amount of rep we had, or if Omni was just in a bad mood. When I got denied, I had all positive rep & had been on the forum for a year or two.. Some niggas have worse than that and get accepted. For all we know, a bot could choose whether we get accepted or denied.

I don't wanna sound ungrateful or anything, but I deserve UB3R ?

(Definitely not getting it after this post, I know. Idc)

Since we don't have to be given a reason for being permanently denied, we'd never know if it was due to how long we've been on the forum, or the amount of rep we had, or if Omni was just in a bad mood. When I got denied, I had all positive rep & had been on the forum for a year or two.. Some niggas have worse than that and get accepted. Well you do not want to look like your account has been compromised or such, so don't randomly change pw, email and all that constantly, stick to the same. 2FA is something that i personally advice anyone to have, especially when applying for uber. It is not an requirement as far as i know, but it shows that you value your account and the security of it.

And as you said, you browse HF on mobile and sometimes it requires mobile data which often uses a dynamic IP. That you can't do anything about. I am in the same situation. Planning on stop using HF on phone however, so my ts should clear up soon. So you can limit yourself, but it might not be easy.

But then you also have to remember that it is not only your ts that matters.

Since we don't have to be given a reason for being permanently denied, we'd never know if it was due to how long we've been on the forum, or the amount of rep we had, or if Omni was just in a bad mood. When I got denied, I had all positive rep & had been on the forum for a year or two.. Some niggas have worse than that and get accepted. Interesting move Mr Omni.

I wonder if those who were perm denied will succeed this time around when applying.

Elite Hacker 69 - April 20, 2017, 3:40 pm

I'm not really sure what the process is for getting approved, but since I'm not perm denied again the only thing that I can say is that I have found some more respect for Omniscient as a forum owner. You don't meet a lot of people that are truly 100% going to stick to their gut instinct and set of morals on a daily basis. I don't deserve ub3r recently because I'm basically a new member around here but applied anyway, and back when I wanted it the first time I was just a kid full of false self-entitlement.

I could probably donate $50,000 to this forum and still be perm denied. The exclusivity or facade of exclusivity is what keeps me coming back here. If I'm still not good enough (and maybe never will since it's permanent) then it's just reason to continually improve myself to be a better person, because if I piss one person off then I'm going to piss another person off, and everyone should work towards having unanimous respect from everyone they meet.

Although a clean sales-history is great, that's not the only thing Omni deems necessary for UB3R.

Enabling 2FA likely would have helped, no?

Well I got ub3r just recently. I dont have massive amounts of rep nor do I have thousands of posts. It just goes to show that anyone can get ub3r, I think that the main factor in getting approved for ub3r is a clean account history, also your ability to follow site policies, if you have had a lot of warnings then I dont think you would get approved. Of course no body will ever know the exact requirements but those are some that I feel omni takes in to account.
