Thread: Binding RAT to .exe \(And still letting both work fine\)

natedavid33 - May 5, 2017, 2:56 am

So I know of people who crack games and such, and a few people rely on me for that kind of thing. Would I be able to bind a RAT directly to the cracked game launchers .exe file so the game can run perfectly (When properly extracted with the proper required files) without compromising the integrity of the game? Like say The Sims 4, could I bind a RAT to the TS4.exe launcher, and still have it run TS4.exe without a hitch? I just want to know if it is possible, as I know cracked games show up as viruses sometimes or are installed with the AV off to be sure no files get corrupted, and I hope the user will say "No it isn't a virus, stupid AV" and allow my RAT through.

Well as of now, I don't have/need anything bound (I'm working out a problem with my ports and such for y RAT), I was just asking if it was possible in preparations for when I can resolve my issues, or if I could at least crypt it in a simple way. Not FUD, just enough to get past Windows Defender.

Simply make self extracting SFX archive.

Nobody else actually answered your question, so I'll just take the time to answer it directly.

YES, very possible, and people do it all the time. Keep in mind that even if your AV does not detect a file, it may still be infected with a stub which is FUD for runtime and scantime.

Spreading malware through torrents is possibly one of the oldest spreading methods in the book.

These RAT related questions would be better suited in the RAT section, just fyi. Consider posting there next time :)

Start > Run, Type "iexpress"

Binder built right in to windows lol.

shellter.exe if you're looking for a program to do it for you...

CULTSWEGMAFIA - May 7, 2017, 4:16 am

I haven't used a RAT in a long time but I believe there's an option in some builders on RATs but I'm not sure.

flomo1 - May 10, 2017, 10:06 am iexpress on Windows is the best i think so

Nozreon - May 12, 2017, 12:27 am

You can use rakabulle for bind 2 .exe become 1 .exe file blazingfiremonster - May 12, 2017, 7:07 am

Does binding makes it more FUD? Do you bind the crypted RAT to the decoy program?
