SIM-2501407 - May 12, 2017, 2:38 pm

SITE \(Click Me\)

Discord

Introduction:

[*] We are back! After a year of inactivity, RSPUnit has collectively decided to revive our site. It is no longer an invite-only forum, however, you do have to apply to become a full member!

About Us:

[*] Despite RSPS being a dying scene and attempts by owners to patch bugs, exploitation of bugs is still thriving. RSPUnit is a bug abusing forum that enables users to share ideas, work independently or in a group, and find new forms of bugs. We do it all: smuggles, dupes, CFTs (Control Force Teleports), Auto-wins & rule changing at duel arena, stalls, and much more!

Promo Video:

[Video: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bNuFeoMjPrY>]

Features of RSPUnit (Some of these are members+):

- [*] [Section] 317 Bug Abusing Tutorials
- [*] [Section] 317 Bug Abusing Show-Offs
- [*] [Tutorial] Client Deobfuscation and Reflection Tutorial
- [*] [Tutorial] Rune Agent and Cheat Engine Tutorials
- [*] [Section] Higher Revision Bug Abusing Tutorials
- [*] [Section] Higher Revision Bug Abusing Show-Offs
- [*] [Section] Private Sector For Skilled Bug Abusers
- [*] [Release] Free, up to date, Rune Agent configs

Why should you join? To...

- [*] Learn basics of bug abusing.
- [*] Collaborate with like minded individuals.
- [*] Create life-time friendships.
- [*] Wreck servers if desired.

A few posts on RSPS bugs that I found (this is just from my own experiences recently):

Good to see the notorious bug abuse community is back. I've had several run-ins with your members as an RSPS player over the years.

Some of our members are actually working on servers of their own, and I very excited to see their content. Personally, I just want to rub it in their faces that I can still bug abuse on their servers before I help them patch up the bugs.

Do you guys share anything or keep it all private?It's a mix, some of tutorials I mentioned are in the private sectors for members. In the skilled section there is private dupe methods, smuggles, etc. With that being said, it comes down to the members themselves on what they release publicly and what they do not. If the method is not yours originally, you do not have permission to share it (unless the found of it permits it). If you are the founder, you can keep it to yourself or you can share it the world. For example, I smuggled on SoulPlay, but I am making the decision to keep it between myself and one other member. He is not allowed to share the method, but I may release the method for skilled or members to see.

Also, welcome to RSPUnit! I'll have some useful threads out this weekend for you as well others.

Well, let me correct myself, not while I have been a member of RSPUnit. When I first joined (in late 2013) he had just stepped down from being a moderator. In 2014 he returned, was re-promoted, and ever since fall of 2015, he has been inactive. However, The Plague Doctor, of course has contributed to the forum in several ways in the past. I wish he would get back into bug abusing since I know he is very talented at bug abuse for both Runescape and Runescape Private Servers. He is one of the few legends in my personal book.

(May 12, 2017 11:14 PM)shreder Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I remember I joined then I actually was able to glitch and shit with minimal knowledge back thenUnfortunately the game has changed. You can still find servers like Dawntained that are just down-right garbage, but most of them are pretty 'secure' nowadays. Secure as in they blocked third party softwares from working entirely, or it doesn't simply take 5 mins to dupe on the server. The problem about RSPS bug abuse is not that alone, it is a combination of the blockage of third parties as well a server lack of new content. Despite these obstacles, bugs can still be found. For example, os-scape (has?=D) had duel arena glitches and plenty of dupes on their server.

It's possible that you and I have glitches together actually. Do you recall your alias on rspunit or for when you bug abused?

I moved threads into public sections and posted some other threads on useful information. If you guys have any questions, post them on the forum or join or discord.

Would love to see this gain attention. Even though I'm not actively involved in the RSPS community anymore, I have multiple friends who are, so I'll share this site w/ them. I like the concept as a whole, it's just very difficult to attract users to a server nowadays unless you've been around for an extensive amount of time.

Always wanted to get into bug abuse and bug testing just as a hobby/interested. I may have to sign up and give it a little go.
