If they straight out admit to scamming (on-site), can they be banned?

Cryptic™ - May 16, 2017, 11:25 am

Nope. HF does not get involved in deal disputes.

Omni sometimes bans them if it was a huge scammer that would impact the community negatively or if they admit it.

Just take a look at this, dude scams 4k+ and is roaming the site freely.

The Help Documents answer your question, OP.

Quote:Our staff on occasion will ban a scammer, if the evidence is on site and apparent.

Edit: Also, don't expect staff to do so.

on-site.

Possible that if the platform they use to admit has been verified on site then it would still count for something.

What do you consider E-Whoring to be? It's scamming in some form right?

Wouldn't really call that "out-right" admitting to scamming someone. Anyhow, your question has been answered. Staff do not generally intervene in scam reports and you shouldn't expect them to do so.

You make your deal dispute if you have been scammed, that's it. Don't expect staff members to get involved, doesn't matter if the user admits to scamming, they will look into it if they have a reason to do so (their own reason, not yours). They have always been clear with that.

I guess you made this hthread because of the 4 gbp scam? oMullholland kinda admitted it.

I don't ewhore but I don't see how it's scamming the people?

For example

They pay for 10 photos, They get 10 photos.

It's just reselling?

Scammers are banned all the time. I've seen members banned for admitting to scamming on site but it's not exactly something that happens a lot and you should never PM a staff member about something like that.

Its at staff's discretion.

Omni's answer was very clear here: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=3911772>

That was in 2013, a lot of shit has changed since then to all those saying staff don't get involved in deal disputes, they do, and people have been banned for scamming

OP, if it was on site (the scam, and all the evidence) then they openly admitted it ON SITE, they could stand a high chance of being banned

Tony Stark - May 17, 2017, 3:59 am

Staff don't get involved. You deal at your own risk and shouldn't trust anyone.
