I will work on getting a video uploaded for proof. I have screen shots of speed test. Basically it is a device, we have HTC & LG devices, you get unlimited 4g LTE data & hotspot. We also have 3g versions. Anyways the 4G LTE is about 5-10mbps down. And the service runs on sprint.

I personally use a 3g version for a lot of stuff I do and it's fast for me, the 4g is even faster. These are very rare, most people just sell methods for unlimited verizon hotspots, and this is very different.

Vouch, I know the sellers of this and that they are legit and very helpful. I know a bunch about these phones and I can vouch for it's legitimacy. Currently, bought a device waiting for it to ship right now. Will update everyone on how this goes, but they are in-fact selling what they are advertising!

Well see that's exactly one reason why, you currently pay a month bill. With our Infinity Phone you NEVER pay a monthly bill and you get truly unlimited, no caps 4g LTE data. Sure paying $20 a month is cheap for you, but it does add up. With our device you save money and it's fully anonymous.

Well so far this has been up and running for the past 2 years with no problems at all. So I don't see why it won't continue to work that long, as long as the company stays in business, which our phones run off of sprint towers, then I'd say it's safe to last for years to come. Sprint is a huge company and has been around for several decades.

As far as the 5g, it is a possibility that it will work with it, I just can't say for sure yet as I don't have 5g in my area yet. My partner and I haven't even gotten that far ahead mainly because that technology is very far, few and between.

Unfortunately it has to be our phones. They are mid level phones. Currently we have a few LG Volts in stock, if you want to look up the specs you'll see what I mean by mid level. However the point isn't the speed and stuff of the phone, our selling point is unlimited 4g lte mobile data/hotspot with no monthly bill ever. And it's anonymous which is another strong point.

Sadly with this product it only runs on sprint towers. I have however heard of other methods that you can get unlimited verizon 4g, but you have to pay a monthly bill for that still. I know verizon has good coverage and all, but these devices work great. I get great coverage everywhere I go. And like I said I personally use a 3g version and it's still pretty fast.

I'll have a video of the 3g up and running tomo and hopefully the 4g the next day, just waiting on my partner to send it to me. I personally have the 3g version myself and it works great. And sadly no, we only offer a few select devices, but once again the main sale point is Unlimited Data/Hotspot with No monthly bill ever.

Zink - May 17, 2017, 8:22 pm

Covalent - May 17, 2017, 8:34 pm

is this the virgin mobile data done right exploit?

If Im right this works due to an exploit in the virgin mobile/sprint mvno CDMA/LTE network that is utilized by the qualcomm msm8916 device (snapdragon 410), specifically the part for IMS-VoLTE registration (the msm8916 can bypass IMS registration on LTE and give a thumbs up handshake with the network without a valid key Cheesy) sprint is the data provider for virgin mobile but the exploit runs on virgin mobile data done right it all stems from one of sprints acquisitions a few years back, forgot the name of it but sprint rebranded the company as virgin mobile data done right but the exploit has been on the network since the acquisition

Nah not really. The average person pays $60 a month for phone service, so after 7 months you've already spent $420, and that's if you only pay $60 a month, which doesn't get you fully unlimited data, most all carriers cap you after a certain amount of gb.

Also as far as the product lasting, it has already been working solid for 2 years, the towers it works off of are sprint which is a major company that has been around for decades, so as long as they stay around, this will work.

Correct, you'd be purchasing a device and it has fully unlimited 4g LTE mobile data & hotspot on it, with no monthly bill. Sadly we can no longer implement new devices with this, but the main selling point is the service of unlimited data/hotspot, not the actual device.

I don't see why it wouldn't, however we just can't promise that it will right now. We are trying to expand. As I mentioned earlier it might very well work in Canada, we should have word in a few days. I'm also going to ask my partner what he thinks on the whole roaming thing. I really think it's best in the US & UK, speeds vary on your area as well. For example I use the 3g version a lot and I get 1-3mbps in my area which is fine for me..It seems fairly fast. Now the 4g LTE version in my area will get easily 5-15mbps, mostly on the higher side since I live in a big city with great coverage. But anyways I'll look into the roaming thing and post back when I have the information.

Upon purchase you get a tracking number so you can see exactly when it will arrive and we also have delivery confirmation. We do not supply SIM's only. Whenever you purchase an infinity phone you are getting an actual phone. They do have SIM cards in them, you can't go put it in another phone and it do the same thing. The phones we sell are what I call "Mid level" devices, so they aren't horrible or anything, you can do daily stuff on them if needed, but our whole selling point is the Unlimited 4g LTE data/hotspot with no monthly bill. If we could sell just SIM cards and it worked that way, we probably would.

Correct, you CANNOT use the native Phone/SMS app on the device, Only VOIP. I personally have a device and use VOIP when I need to call or anything and it's not a problem. dealing, which you didn't do. All of our other customers that purchased confirmed on here, then to my partner and have gotten tracking numbers. I'm sorry you dealt with the wrong person, I can't be held responsible for that when you didn't even bother to confirm on here.

Not wanting to use a middle man doesn't mean you are scamming. I never said that I wouldn't ever do it. I told you to contact my partner and speak with him, as he is the one who ships out the devices and mainly seals the deal. If we couldn't of came to another agreement such as half upfront, then we could have probably used a middle man. You didn't even bother reaching out to my partner. Gloryallowed has purchased a device from us and did exactly that, paid half up front, he has his device on the way and tracking number and will be paying the rest when it comes in.

You are just skeptical and like to jump the band wagon, trying to sales trash my thread for no reason. The people that have bought devices from us so far should be getting their devices within a few days now and will be leaving reviews, they were shipped to Canada which takes awhile coming form the US.

Can confirm that this 'error' was no 'error' as both of your thread designers have come forth and have suggested you plotted this entire thing and took advantage of someone not pming.

As for a compensation I was not promised anything despite his or his partners 'mistake'. There is plenty of proof to suggest that Robot orchestrated this entire thing. Legit product or not, this member has shown to the community he cannot be trusted and is very shady. Deal with caution.

As I have repeated myself over and over this was plot he was planning for when someone did not PM. The skype I received was directly on the thread design. This type of thing does not happen by mistake and cannot be missed by anyone with half a brain cell. Both his thread designers have begun speaking on their behalf on this case and all evidence points back to Robot owning that original skype which I got scammed from.

'Big error', no you definitely provided that skype and had access to it, so him not confirming on HF that he dealt with you is just nonsense.

You aren't in the works of rectifying shit, seems you want to keep this going as long as you can. As you can see the person you claim to be resolving the issue with is still posting on your thread saying you've done nothing, and you're just trying to brush it over as if it never happened.

I just received my InfinityPhone LTE in the mail today, and I have nothing but great things to say about this product. First of all the customer service was some of the best I've seen on Hackforums. Both Robot and his partner were able to answer all of my questions and were willing to make a fair deal with me - allowing me to pay 237.50 up front and another 237.50 after I received the phone. It's a shame that this product has gotten negative feedback from the community because this is a great and legitimate product. I will be updating this post soon with a proof video and review as soon as possible. The LTE speeds are blazing fast on this phone; I highly recommend buyers spend the extra $100 for the LTE upgrade because it's worth it. If you live outside the US or the United Kingdom, I don't recommend purchasing this because you won't get enough coverage or any unless you turn on data roaming.

Confirmed, this user (Canadian) has shown proof of no signal, therefore he is returning the device and I am giving him a refund once I receive it back in good working order.

Also, this user was granted a half upfront/half after receiving deal due to being one of the first trusting buyers.

FOR ALL NEW AND OLD THREAD PURVEYORS

Technically we have 3 "sales".

(1 sale from Glory which is in process of being returned/refunded, 1 sale/deal from Dreams, 1 official completed sale from Hello Kitty)

So, for the record: An official first forum sale vouch has officially been established now.

Also...NO INTERNATIONAL SALES at this time. US ONLY

Thanks to everyone who has expressed interest in this product so far.

Yes, this is true for the most part about Sprint. But if you have good/decent signal, this is 100% worth it.

In one of my speed test proof vids, I ONLY have 1-2 bars LTE signal and still can get 20+Mbps.

So 20-40Mbps in a metropolitan is possible im sure. (There are confirmed Sprint speeds tests you can find reports on google of 37+Mbps)

I think for HD streaming 12-16Mbps is the starting speed requirement.

Both Robot and his partner were able to answer all of my questions and were willing to make a fair deal with me - allowing me to pay 237.50 up front and another 237.50 after I received the phone. It's a shame that this product has gotten negative feedback from the community because this is a great and legitimate product. I will be updating this post soon with a proof video and review as soon as possible. The LTE speeds are blazing fast on this phone; I highly recommend buyers spend the extra $100 for the LTE upgrade because it's worth it. If you live outside the US or the United Kingdom, I don't recommend purchasing this because you won't get enough coverage or any unless you turn on data roaming.

Well I'm glad that you decided to get one. I love my 4g device as well, I use it basically everyday. I'm also happy that the speeds are great in your area, can't wait to see a speed test video from you. The fastest I've gotten is like 45MBps. Anyways thanks for buying an infinity phone, stoked that you are enjoying it!

Well, compared to 4g....but that's really subjective, for some 3g speeds are enough. It all depends on your intent with the phones.

(Also you do understand that 3g is theoretically 3Mbps MAX/possible?? And to get that you'd probably have to be sitting underneath the towers)

Regarding the roaming question: short answer NO.....long short answer, anywhere that has Sprint roaming agreements, it should work. I cannot fully confirm, nor deny this, therefore the answer is NO.

We're no longer selling devices to Canada, as the speeds aren't 4g as we expected..it's only 3g/1x. Granted certain parts might be different, we only want to sell devices in the US as of now.

You get unlimited mobile data & hotspot with no data caps or monthly bill. You can call/text but it can only be done via VOIP, on apps like textnow or anything similar. That's what I use personally and it gets me by. I've been using my device for almost 3 months now with no issues.

Why not just not buy at all?

No one is forced to buy anything in this thread.

Its not like someone's family member is being held hostage until someone buys from us....

Everybody should use their OWN discretion.....if they feel uneasy, then don't buy. Its that simple. Either way that's not something we can control. We can only control if we are given a chance.

If they can see past the speculation, trashing, false statements and see that what we have claimed has been legit so far, then they shouldn't have any issues buying.

Hello Kitty decided to do so and was just as skeptical as most on here. He even threatened to report us at first (you want chat logs as proof?? I know you guys just LOOOVE "proof" and "rep" and all that stuff on here) because he thought we might actually been scammers. You can keep on attempt to sales trash my thread. We offered you a 3g device once we found out you had been scammed by chargeback, you didn't want it to take it at the time, you wanted a 4g device which we weren't going to give you..We tried to resolve that issue but it wasn't good enough for you and after over a month of you attempting to sales trash nothing is going to change.

There should be no reason I would want to settle for less because of your mistake. Aside from that, I never said no to the 3g device. I asked you to reconsider and you said no at which point I said I would accept a 3g in good faith since I wasn't going to get what I purchased originally. You costed me $450 because of your mistake and you're not willing to compensate me. Send me the 3g device as you said you 'offered' so we can move past this.

edit; Here are some pms we exchanged after OP noticed me posting on this thread. He threatens me to stop or else he'd have my account closed for 'sales trashing' whenever I mention I want a compensation he just says 'you ruined my sales, therefore you get nothing now'. OP is not truthful about what he says and should be dealt with extreme caution.

(Jun 22, 2017 01:44 PM)PirateAPI Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Would you be willing to give a 12 month warranty with the sale of the phone?

There is basically no way to give a warranty on this service. I can only cover if the device physically has an issue. (Android OS related issues).

Nothing is guaranteed....Just like 3g was phased out by LTE...LTE will be phased out by "5G".

My point being, there are many factors beyond anyone's control except the carrier.

I have no idea how long this will last, and there is no way I can know at a consumer/user level.

Only thing I can do is assure you, that I would not continue to offer this service if I honestly did not foresee it lasting. Or only lasting a short period of time.

I'm not your average phone user....I understand on a fundamental level how carriers and wireless networks work. I also understand about phone system modification.

Since the beginning of this year, i've watched and worked on a backup plan/alternative if anything were to change with this exploit.

I have workarounds i've already tested successfully in the event of certain carriers changes. Granted I can't test for all likely events, but the most prominent methods that carriers use, I have a designated workaround to still receive the data from the network.

But as it stands, i've had no need and everything has been working the same way it has the first day I discovered this was a real legit thing.

I purchased a hotspot from Røbøt last week (via BTC), and up until the point where he was supposed to ship it out, everything was great, and he was very communicative. He even sent me a message last Wednesday (08/02), and said "Hey buddy I'm going to the post office at about 3:30pm (on my lunch break) just wanted to keep you updated."

That's the last I've heard from him, and he hasn't logged in since, and nothing has arrived. Nor did I ever receive a tracking number. I paid him an $50 extra to send it priority express, so I'm confident that if he had actually sent it last Wednesday, it would've arrived by now.

Edit: If anyone is interested in purchasing one of these hotspots, I found a few places where you can buy them. 4GCommunity sells a years worth of Unlimited 4G LTE internet for only $325 (hotspot is included). The only downside is they don't offer an option to purchase with BTC. If you want to buy one using BTC, you can get the same deal as above when you donate $500 or more to Calyx Institute. Although it costs more with Calyx, one bonus is that they're a non-profit, and the donation can be considered a write-off.

Also, for any skeptics who are wondering if those 2 websites are legit, I can promise you they are. Of course, I encourage everyone to do their own due-diligence. However, here's a quote from an article NYMag wrote about Calyx, that mentions why Calyx is able to provide hotspots to those who donate:

NYMag.com Wrote: The story of how Calyx is able to provide these hotspots is good example of how complex federal management of the wireless spectrum can be. In 2013, Sprint acquired Clearwire, gulping up the wireless spectrum Clearwire owned as Sprint upgraded its high-speed data connections to cell-phone users. But the spectrum that Clearwire owned had come with a caveat — it was originally meant to be used for educational purposes, and therefore any owner had to allow access its networks to any nonprofit at a very low cost.

Since Calyx is a nonprofit, they now can use Sprint's extensive upgrades to your advantage. In exchange for $500, you'll get a portable Netgear Fuse Wi-Fi hotspot and SIM card with unlimited access to Sprint's Spark LTE network.
