Thread: [\[Notorious\] VPN Recommendations](#)

Mi2414 - May 19, 2017, 10:16 am

Notorious ~ VPN Recommendations.

Turn your face to the sun and the shadows fall behind you. Quick note about VPN's, Etc.

I've chosen providers that offer great payment methods, operate in better data privacy respected countries, low cost and lastly a great amount of locations. I highly recommend everyone read over this chart with a nice layout on different things you should look at when picking out a VPN. Also, I would highly suggest against renting a VPS and hosting your own via OpenVPN as this is a false sense of security that I see a lot of people recommend here. Below I have listed providers I have used or that others from Notorious have recommended. Each provider will be listed with the site URL then below I will have a list of anonymity based payment options they provide followed by pricing and features they may offer that you might like as opposed to another provider.

VPN Provider Recommendations

Features ~ All countries for any plan, 2-10 Device connections depending on the plan, High speed, Plus/Secure/Tor servers are also up for grabs with this provider. Visionary is a great bundle package if you use Protonmail.

ExpressVPN ~ Site

This list will be updated frequently if you guys have any questions or feel I should change something please let me know as I'm open to all suggestions. Also, VPN's do not guarantee privacy at all. Also, I'm looking for feedback at this time, please let me know what you think so far(: If you need to learn more about Privacy and Anonymity, check out this thread by PVA located here.

Thanks for all the feedback, I would rather people go with a actual provider that might be more expensive but would be better respected than someone renting the hardware like most VPN sellers here. If anyone has any questions or suggestions, feel free to let me know.

Honey S?ngh - May 20, 2017, 12:29 pm

No Expressvpn? They're pricier but more robust than the other options.

BravoAlpha - May 20, 2017, 3:24 pm

Thanks for this post man :) really useful. Is there a particular reason you are not a fan of the smaller VPNs offered here?

If you look at the chart in the OP, you will see they operate under the jurisdiction of British Virgin Islands. You can also see they actually do log some things also.

Simply they don't own the hardware. So they can't 100% be sure they aren't logging.

Also, PIA operates out of the United States.

What is your reasoning behind the first comment you made? Also just because PIA operates out of the United States doesn't mean it's a good provider. The United States actually doesn't have any Data Retention laws at this time, they have also proved in court they don't log.

Because from personal experience, N-o-r-d gives me under 1 Mb Download/Upload speed when I normally get 150/15 (tested across multiple devices and servers).

And I know that, I was just saying since you didn't include another VPN that operated out of Great Britain, I wasn't sure if you knew PIA operates out of the USA.

That doesn't mean it doesn't work fast for others. I already knew where PIA operated at the time of making this thread. Not trying to be rude or anything mate.

If it hasn't got a kill switch, i suggest switching VPN providers.

They do have a Killswitch, not sure why he said they didn't. He's probably just using OpenVPN and not the Mullvad client. But like Agonises said a Killswitch is a must.
