Just got the letter in, I've been chosen as tribute.

who here has been to jury duty? What did you spend your $30 on?

Apparently we get $30 and $0.33 per mile that we have to travel

(Oahu, Hawaii)

I had it but got it postponed for now, i think ill prolly get another letter in September

Lrrr - May 23, 2017, 2:38 pm

Just ignore the letter, they won't ever actually do anything about it

I am not a lawyer, and I do not play a lawyer on TV

BlazinBlunts - May 23, 2017, 2:38 pm

Eh I forgot and did not show up

Six God - May 23, 2017, 3:43 pm

i told them i didn't live in the county they were trying to send me to and i ended up not having to do it

Dood - May 23, 2017, 4:43 pm

I got a letter about 2 weeks after I turned 19. I told them that I couldn't, due to being in a different part of the country for school, and they never replied back. Definitely a shame, because the whole process sounds pretty interesting and fun.

ZerFallen - May 23, 2017, 5:21 pm

I've never been summoned, and I hope I never am.

Mac Mill?r - May 23, 2017, 5:22 pm

as old as i am, i just got my first letter a few weeks ago, i go in august fun fun

Hotsauce™ - May 23, 2017, 10:43 pm

On of my co-workers had to do "jury duty".... hes been gone for 2 days so far.... I think our company pays you your shift hours for jury duty..... could be wrong.

Amp - May 23, 2017, 10:52 pm

Lol, I wish I could participate in jury duty.

Rotca - May 23, 2017, 11:11 pm

I've been to jury duty and actually got picked to serve on the jury. The selection process is fucking horrible. Takes 6 hours and is boring as fuck. Actually being on the jury though was interesting and fun. You get to decide the fate of some low life. My guy got that hot "guilty" verdict. Hahaha

From what I know, you're not supposed to talk to anyone about the stuff you hear and see, is that correct?

gringo - May 23, 2017, 11:25 pm

Shits boring as fuck, I got selected a couple of years ago and we just sat in a room for hours and couldn't have our phones. I just napped and eventually they sent us home and I never got a call back.

Not while the case is going on. If you do, nothing will happen to you legally though. You'll get scolded by the judge and kicked off the jury.

I was summoned for jury duty, and after they postponed it for awhile I just decided not to call back after two weeks of waiting. A few days later, a police officer showed up at my house with court papers. Went to court a week later, I was fined a $50 fine but the Judge knocked it down to $25 since it was during the holidays.

You must live in a small town

Super Trapper - May 24, 2017, 10:17 am

I got called for jury duty the first year was eligible. I would wipe my ass with $30 before sitting through a long boring trial. I told them I have IBS and they exempt me for 7 years.

Not really, it's not a big town. But there is about 40,000 or so people living here.

desir0 - May 24, 2017, 5:49 pm

I'd love to be called up for jury duties.

As much as courts are long winded and boring at times, the actual case would be interesting.

12 angry men shit. Think the process might be slightly different in the US to how it is here in UK
