Thread: Warning for posting a discord link.

BATHING APE - May 28, 2017, 2:46 am

So basically i posted a thread in the discord titled Lizard Squad Discord. This is purely because the discord server title is Lizard Squad. A few hackers are in this discord but it is not directly associated to Blackhat activity. Then minimalist junks the thread and gives me a warning for disallowed Blackhat activity. Sort out your staff omni this is hardly fair.

Might be because lizard squad is a gang of domestic terrorists.

But its just a name of a discord group. The warning was given due to blackhat activity but in no way was my thread blackhat also i was left a note telling me to read the Help Docs and on the blackhat subject in no place does it say you are not allowed to use phrases or names of known hacking groups.

Creating threads like this probably isn't the most appropriate nor mature way of dealing with it.

Use a terrorist name for your joy, expect to be treated like the terrorist.

like the terrorist.

But my point is its just a name of a discord channel. Even if it were called ISIS Fanclub it doesnt mean anything its a channel name Posting a thread like this definitely will not help your case. You should PM any staff member if he doesn't reply and see what they have to say. Staff almost never get their warnings wrong though, so I'd say you should just accept the fact you broke a rule and move on.

The warning will expire.

If you honestly call your channel the ISIS fanclub expect to be on the NSA watch list.

You just made it all worse with this thread. They could even ban you for this thread.

The warning is correct. You just dug yourself a grave though.

If you discuss anything DBA related on here, expect a warning.

I.e. If you share a group called "Carders Rule" or "DDos Skid Boys", you would expect a warning. Likewise for anything involved with those cyber terrorists.

minimalist - May 28, 2017, 3:51 am

Competing sites and servers can't be shared on here. That includes your hacking Discord server.

Omniscient - May 29, 2017, 4:15 pm

Yes, terribly unfair.
