

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Suggestion - Auto close threads that have not been responded to after 1 Month

Copywriter - May 29, 2017, 7:51 pm

I hope this would prevent new people from digging up posts 5 fucking years back.
I see this at least once a week, maybe change the close time to 3 months.
Just a suggestion.

Charger - May 29, 2017, 7:55 pm

Why? Grave digging isn't against the rules as long as you post something relevant.

Steve - May 29, 2017, 8:09 pm

If this were to happen it wouldn't be something as small as one or three months. That said, I doubt this will ever be implemented.

Copywriter - May 29, 2017, 8:11 pm

(May 29, 2017 07:55 PM)Charger Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Why? Grave digging isn't against the rules as long as you post something relevant. Yeah, but it's 5 years old, and some ask for the download link from a closed member back in 2012.

(May 29, 2017 08:09 PM)Steve Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If this were to happen it wouldn't be something as small as one or three months. That said, I doubt this will ever be implemented. Yeah the time could be changed.

GenericSkid - May 29, 2017, 8:13 pm

After a few months? Thats really dumb. After a year, then it would seem reasonable. But regardless there are some things that are timeless. There may be better iterations of the post, but it could have just been what the user found using the search function.

M?xim - May 30, 2017, 12:46 am

Well, this forum is for discussing and there are no rules for grave digging tbh.
Members are allowed to grave dig as long as the post contributes to the topic and such.

I don't see this being implanted because it makes no sense.

Vitani - May 30, 2017, 12:49 am

As the users above me already mentioned, grave digging is not against the rules as long as your post (and the thread) are relevant or contributing in one way or another.
If someone starts grave digging in the lounge for example, simply report them and let staff take care of it.

Eagle 95 - May 30, 2017, 1:13 am

Threads are locked if the grave dig is not relevant to the thread or for example, OP is closed like 2 years ago or something.

Suggested and denied many many many times before.

reply inspired by commandant Eric Lassard