Thread: Does being bad at school mean i be bad at life ?

Ted™ - May 30, 2017, 7:17 pm

i am not doing okay in school this year is my last year as a school student

Educational system is way different in Egypt than most of your guys countries

i always get bad grades i barely pass my exams i have finals coming in the next days these finals in Egypt determine what i am going to be if i don't get high marks i will never be something like an Engineer or a Doctor i feel like my life have been fucked i hate to study i hate school i don't want my life to suck in the future

Well, school is just mostly about remembering things aka copy/paste

I mean, anyone can work at a cash register

As long as you can read, write (correctly), do math, understand how to not blow yourself up accidentally and how to learn from the mistakes of the past then you don't really need school.

Oh wait.

Not everybody wants to be a doctor or engineer and at least where I'm from you can fix your grades later either way so that you can get into good universities and shit. It's probably not great that you got mediocre grades but it also probably isn't the end of the world.

Spoiler (Click to View) or maybe it is No, school barely teaches you shit you need irl. School doesn't prove your bad at life you decide that for yourself. With the things you do.

I'm 17 and got discharge with 35 credits and I'm currently making more money than my brother who graduated hs and did 2 years of college. I'm still looking to finish my hs tho but online

In my honest opinion, school is what you make of it. I focused during my school years on my online ventures and less on the actual knowledge they feed us. Everything school has taught me does not relate to absolutely anything I do on a day to day basis. I am also working as an Info Tech. Not doing good in school does not mean you are going to have a bad life, find a different route. Learn new things outside of school.

Hell no. Just look at people like Sir Richard Branson, terrible at school and now look where he's at.

If you still live with your parents and don't have to pay bills, yes ?

and what about your future ?

Once you have the basics down, not really.
School is drawn out and is big business though.

I don't believe in school past high school. Sure I attended anyways but society demands it.

where i live your future depends on how you do in school sadly

div80 - May 30, 2017, 10:33 pm

Depends on all sorts of things; aspirations, family connections/wealth etc

Generally without a school diploma these days (and often with one), people are struggling.

Your options are basically live off parents, get some contact to land you a cushty government job, stay in school, put together a credible business plan or rehearse asking "fries with that?"

TexT24 - May 30, 2017, 10:35 pm

Some of the smartest people in the world don't succeed in school. No big deal!

Honestly man , school means nothing , you can still go to university later on and become a doctor or anything your heart desires.
