Thread: Think i have bipolar disorder

The Shark Inc. - June 2, 2017, 5:50 am

My problem is i can't find friends with almost same interests as me,basically nobody.
i have some pals but i pretend to be a completely another person when i hangout with them , probably i wouldn't had any friends if i was my self when i hangout with people.I feel having two personalities

i think my behavior has taken big dimensions and i feel like a have bipolar disorder.
Also use social engineering for making new friends and i am pretty good at,

but i'd like not to

seems like HF is the right place for you, welcome

?Alexander - June 2, 2017, 6:20 am the things you described don't even come close to what being bipolar is...

Abandon your social life. Welcome home friend.

I think you do not know at what level I do it.

JAS - June 2, 2017, 12:04 pm

I think I do as too. I know when people lie to me and this seems to happen a lot. I get mood swings as well. I don't really have many friends too. But hey. I'm happy I guess

Malevolent - June 2, 2017, 12:05 pm

I always consider that I might have it, but at the end of the day I really don't think I do.

BR?ND?N - June 2, 2017, 12:14 pm

Yeah no that isn't bipolar disorder, that's called not having friends.

Bipolar disorder is where you have sudden changes of mood or sudden outburst of emotions. It's uncontrollable and often you forget whatever you said or did during the "blackout". Bipolar is not fun, and it's not as simple as white girls on FB make it out as "oh my god i got so mad at my bff i'm bipolar lol". When I see that shit it pisses me off as it takes away the legitimacy of it.

indeed i don't think that it's "Bipolar disorder". i would call it "having problems making friends"

OP is just socially awkward.

I have the same problem but luckily for me all my friends in high school were also socially awkward.

I am not the kind of human you describe.

necr0dr - June 2, 2017, 12:49 pm

I'm diagnosed with bipolar disorder around 2 years ago, if you have any questions just shoot me a PM. But from what you've described it doesn't sound like bipolar.

Hey man. I have been diagnosed with quite a few disorders, one of them being bi-polar. It's possible. If you're curious to know more about it look into the DSM-V. That's the Diagnostic Statistical Manual - 5th Edition. I am pretty sure that's the most recent addition. What it does is display a list of symptoms (Like a spectrum. inb4 pathetic attempt to be edgy by using the word autistic) Anyway; these symptoms will be able to give you a better look at what it's "like" to be bipolar. I'd suggest seeking help from a psychologist first that can help you determine if you have it. Then afterwards an appointed psychiatrist can help you possibly get medicated for it. TRUST ME WHEN I SAY THIS. DRUGS ARE NOT A FIX FOR BIPOLAR. Just fair warning; most people will probably chastise me like "Hey... man..! Weed is fucking awesome man" They just need to shush :p anyway. If you have any personal questions about mental disabilities, drugs, or just counseling, PM me.

EDIT: Also you can't diagnose yourself by just reading the DSM. You need a counselor because (again, trust me) Trying to SEE your bi-polar is like looking at feeling or thought. Shit doesn't work that way.

You in no way shape or form have bipolar disorder.

I have bipolar and roughly what Brenden said is bipolar disorder.

You don't have that. You're just crazy and socially awkward. Why do you think you have this illness.
Tell us a story of what you did that counts as social engineering friends? We need more details.
