huongviet - June 6, 2017, 5:19 am

This will come handy to a lot of users here who only relied on scan.majyx and pscan to scan their files

Big ups for this thread OP!

eCoLoGy - June 6, 2017, 6:25 am

Great stuff mate.

XCSscan.com is a great scanner.

Milan Hermanus - June 6, 2017, 7:07 am

This whole "distributing antivirus" is bullshit

I tested this theory myself, crypted a darkcomet build and scanned 10 different stubs each day for 3 days, not a single fucking detection...

Stop pulling shit out of your ass

Thanks for including DirectLink.cz on there. Unfortunately, the site went down at approx 6PM EST on 6/5/17. I am working on solutions to keep the service up and running. I am aiming to have it up in a few days. I'll PM you when it's back up.

You could be right but the fact is they state in the Privacy agreement they share your files. Your file could just not be shared yet.

i even rated them -1Virustotal does distribute your stubs lmao. You must be dumb.

Also, as soon as you scan on virustotal, you can see people connecting just to analyze your file. Which you won't find on a non-distributing site.

yotoprules - June 6, 2017, 10:21 am

Add <http://icecloud.pw>, it's a nice website hosted by a HF user that doesn't distribute.

They don't distribute. I mean unless you can provide valid proof they do, which I know is a very big thing to ask of retards who can't think for themselves.

The One Who Knocks - July 15, 2017, 11:44 pm

Will the free sites that are down be up in the near future? I heard that the scan4you owners got r3kt legally and all of those sites used it.

Does anyone know of any good offline scanners which won't distribute your files?

I need a scanner which will scan my "New Folder" with around 1000 Split files of a single executable file.

Something like poison scanner but offline so it will also scan the folder and not only individual files.
