Thread: Advice for those holding STRAT

AJ911 - June 8, 2017, 10:00 am

Over the past few days, there's been a lot of questions about whether to hold, buy or sell STRAT.

There was clear technical information that STRAT was going to retract from the huge price movement made over the past two weeks. Against all bets made by those who refused to believe that STRAT would break 0.0034, the trendlines of STRAT clearly show that it was on a downward trend.

My advice as of the 5th June was to get out of STRAT, breaking even just before BTC squeezed up and affected the altcoin market capital. Over the past few days we have seen STRAT decline in price, with support at 0.0031/30.

Based on predictions and charting that has been pretty accurate to date, either STRAT will reverse pretty soon (upwards) having now retracted to the end of a wedge pattern, or decline further down to 0.0028/25 which were previous highs earlier last week.

The factor that affects this the most is whether or not BTC recovers or continues to drop. It is not the case that if BTC drops, alt coins go up and vice versa. It is much more the case that both indicate market confidence and right now a lot of investors are waiting to see which direction prices go.

It is always the case that many traders will be looking to get in at the lowest price before the next gap up, however judging that is always the risk as we don't know what the bottom is.

Here's a chart, indicating the initial wedge pattern, which STRAT broke out of early but failed to make a new high, but created a parallel channel and trended downwards pretty accurately between channels as you can see. It has support at 0.0031 which is the base of that wedge pattern but it failed to gain momentum to make new highs, indicating that STRAT was slowly but steadily selling off. We will pretty much see sometime within the next 24 hours what direction STRAT goes.

Personally. I had the opportunity to get into STRAT at .0031 but didn't go for it as discipline should be the basis of all trades. I still think that STRAT will further decline past the support, but no one can really know for sure.

If a stock goes up 20 percent it makes the world wide news, Stratis went up 500 percent in a matter of weeks, your charts are complete bs anything can happen Stratis is just readjusting.

VideoWarfare - June 8, 2017, 10:12 am

STRAT has so much that we haven't seen yet. In my opinion this is just whale manipulation at the moment. Lmao people (like the author of this thread) are panicking like crazy. We havent even seen STRAT in action with the up coming BREEZE wallet, which will impact the price a LOT. People, this is the SAME thing that people said when Ehtereum when up in price and then droped 10% days later. Keep holding, we have yet to see the amazing impact the STRAT will give us.

I am holding my STRAT.. I still have confidence in it.

AJ911 - June 9, 2017, 9:31 am

I know I projected STRAT to potentially dip further to lower supports around .28, however I think that there is enough support to maintain around $9 mark. June is supposedly a good month for fundamental factors coming into play, so buying now would be a good option in order to get in before another retest of the high.

Time will tell though.

Im High - June 9, 2017, 9:42 am

Well, I got in at .31 and I hoped that it would be a good spot. I will more just buy more if it dips to .28 or even lower than .3 most likely.

I can hold onto it for quite a bit so that in itself should help a bit.

AJ911 - June 10, 2017, 1:07 pm

Update on STRAT.

The pattern and trend confirmed and we have seen STRAT almost reach the low of .25. This is probably bad news for a lot of traders, however, this should give some of you a $1000 dollar reason to research and study what you're looking at. STRAT downline trend is coming down to meet the support of .25.

If it breaks this due to continual steady declination it could further reach .2314 as it briefly dipped below .25

Levels below .25 are as follows;

.2314

.2203

.207

I don't know when it will go back up, possibly off any one of these levels of support, or lower. You can however use these levels as entries and exits.

To be fully transparent. I took an informed risk, but was also impatience and had itchy fingers and bought 14k of STRAT at .32 and got out at .29. I took a loss of $1600 as I went against my own chart :(

Looks like the main blockchains are shaping up to be Ethereum, Stratis, Antshares, and Lisk. Idk about tezos. But it's getting crowded.

They all have their own flavour, and I think all of them will have a place in the crypto future.

Agreed, could be potentially dangerous to buy-in right now. I've been seeing 100+ BTC buy orders, something definitely smells fishy.

If any of you didn't buy in near $7 or below and you don't plan on holding long term and just want to short it early I'd be very cautious. A dump followed by a correction is most likely to happen again at some point this is ridiculous.

No, I think you completely misunderstood my post. I'm saying it seems like there is a large pump going on right now, whether it is due to hype or it being organized I don't know, but to be wary if you didn't buy in before last correction. This is not healthy growth at all.

Oh I gotcha now! Only if you didn't get in at an early price such as below $7 (really even lower than that). Personally I won't be selling but I'm speaking for those who bought in much higher the other day right before the correction and want to secure a short-term gain. If you believe in the coin and bought low then I'd recommend to not sell period as you would lose much more than you could gain. But yeah, I'd say to be prepared to sell if you bought in late ($8+). Not sure when but this isn't healthy growth and it isn't going to be sustainable at all.

I got in at $5, so sad watched it at $2 and didn't pull the trigger. So still nice profits thus far. But aren't you missing the fact that even if I sell (let's say $3000 worth) and reinvest at $8 that's still profit? You don't gain more by holding... I think I'm correct?

Like if I sell at $9/ea, 333.33 STRAT and get 3k. Rebuying at $8 gives me 375 STRAT. Pretty irrelevant at what price I got in at. Just doesn't look as pretty in the portfolio.

And it's still $9.4 for me, what's yours :o

No, if you bought in at $5/ea then you were able to get way more coins then you would be able to buy at $8/ea.

Selling at $9/ea and buying at $8/ea would be profitable though. The price is most definitely relevant.

These coins, whether you bought them at $12 or $0.01 all hold the same value? Selling coins and buying them back a dollar cheaper yields more coins regardless of current investment timing.

A coin bought at $12 just doesn't give the same % as a coin bought at $.01. You obtain the same amount of money though.

Buying coins at $12 vs $0.01 is a huge difference, it affects how many coins you are able to buy. No, if that were the case then you would not be making as much profit. Here I'll explain it a little simpler:

You buy $100 worth of STRAT @ $5/ea = 20 STRAT

You sell 20 STRAT @ $8/ea = $160

That's $60 profit.

You buy $100 worth of STRAT @ $7/ea = 14.29 STRAT

You sell 14.29 STRAT @ $12/ea = $171.48

That's $71.48 profit.

Total profits = $60 + $71.48 = $131.48

If you held from at $5/ea

20 STRAT @ $12/ea = $240

That's $140 profit.

Do you get it now mate?

d4rkj4y - June 11, 2017, 2:55 am

I'm in between flights so I added to my STRAT portfolio 300 strat @ $7 (I sold off around $10 when I bought for $3).

Looks like a pump. I expect a decent retracement and perhaps a stronger bull run.

Either way I'm in it until at least $20

You buy $100 worth of STRAT @ $5/ea = 20 STRAT

You sell 20 STRAT @ $8/ea = $160
That's $60 profit.

You buy $100 worth of STRAT @ $7/ea = 14.29 STRAT
You sell 14.29 STRAT @ $12/ea = $171.48
That's $71.48 profit.

Total profits = $60 + $71.48 = $131.48

If you held from at $5/ea
20 STRAT @ $12/ea = $240
That's $140 profit.

Do you get it now mate?

I understand your math there, however I thought in your earlier post you said there's no reason, if you "bought in early" (believe you said <$5) theres no reason to sell due to the fact you will not be making more money. Or rather holding will make you more money. My point to you is, I actually bought in at $5.3 --- let's call it $5 for sake of even number.

I bought 450 STRAT.  $450 \times $5 = $2250$  investment. If I sold at $9,  $450 \times $9 = $4050$  and then rebought at $8,  $$4050/$8 = 506.25$  STRAT.

That being said, I have gained more STRAT, and my entry price way back when is completely irrelevant. I now have more STRAT even at this higher price.

Holding will make you more money and I explained why. Obviously if you reinvest your profits you made from the first sell-off then you would make more money that's just common sense. You were trying to say that buying coins at price A is the same as at price B which I already explained why that isn't true. It seems like you're just trying to be right here mate.

Also re-investing puts you at a much higher risk to lose your profits if the value of the coin were to drop.

I kinda did that's the fucking funny part I put all the money I had into it at that time when it was 10$ a coin and sold at 250. (Only had 30$ but that's besides the point). Everyone was expecting ETH to go up.
