

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Terrifying Life Experiences?

Yakless - June 11, 2017, 8:50 pm

Just recently something actually terrifying has happened to me and I wanted to know what terrifying things you guys have seen happen or have happened to you.

I was eating a grilled chicken go wrap from Wendy's and the sauce fell out of one side and smacked on my thigh with a POP sound. It's really cold. I wrote this post before I wiped it off. I still haven't wiped it off.

vvs1 - June 11, 2017, 8:55 pm

I would say mine would be swerving off the road in between a street sign and a power pole

Kaleb™ - June 11, 2017, 8:57 pm

I saw some little girl on a bike get hit by a car. Luckily she was ok and didn't have any broken bones or anything. The officer came up to me and asked me some questions about it.

Saltpeter - June 11, 2017, 8:59 pm

Once when I was younger I was eating some cheese pizza with a loose tooth. Well you can guess what happened, I ended up eating and swallowing the tooth.

That one freaked me out for a while.

Mom - June 11, 2017, 9:04 pm

I really haven't had a huge terrifying moment in my life, other than when one of my parents are on their phones and swerve into the other lane, or across the double yellow, which really isn't terrifying unless we're really close to a car, but other than that, not really.

Minnesota Nice - June 11, 2017, 9:06 pm

Frankly that would be traumatizing and I'd have to check myself into some form of therapy.

Year - June 11, 2017, 9:15 pm

The thing I can remember right now that was Terrifying in a way for me was on my 200ug trip for like 5 minutes in reality , I completely tripped out in my mind and saw everything black in my vision at night time in a camping tent I was in a park with my ex [was the first time we hung out ever]. I thought I was see'ing blue/red/orange lights as if cops were getting close and close to our camping tent with their cars (mind you there are no police or roads anywhere near close to where we are in the park lol) so I was freaking for no reason , I threw out all my weed and I thought we had been caught and I thought I physically was in Jail , but my mind was lagging and was showing my memories of being in the tent tripping and going through ego death or some shit. In reality I obviously was in the tent like tripping hard af , but I had fooled myself into believe we had been roped and I was in an actual jail in a jail room and all. I visualized everything so solidly that I honestly thought I was fucked for a good 5-10 minutes , until I felt a physical touch on me and it was my ex hugging me as to her seeing me going through some tough shit (she was on 200ug as well) , she really helped me out and everything was cool! Once I cooled down and got to my senses i processed everything I just went through , and it was fucking crazy nuts , but really cool at the end of it all. I would definitely call what I went through in a way "terrifying" yes ;)

palm sweaty - June 11, 2017, 10:13 pm

Arguing with someone in a hotel room at 5am who could easily kill you and dispose of your body to never be found.

Luckily, the person did not kill me. Safe to live another day. Ish.
Unless a hit gets put out on me.
In that case. Rip me.

BR?ND?N - June 11, 2017, 10:22 pm

Well I had a car going around 60, coming straight at me because I accidentally ran into the street. They slammed their brakes and the front end was inches from me.

Another time was when I got stabbed. Which was probably the most exhilarating moment of my life. It happened quickly, but I never had that kind of fear before. When you're walking, and you get a gut feeling there is someone following you, only to turn around and be swung at. It's fun.

Only real times my life was in danger. Had a few gun threats in school, have had kids threaten to kill me etc, however none of them did anything and I'm cool with most of those kids now ?

Stork - June 11, 2017, 11:08 pm

I had a air compressor explode 2 feet away from me in Sept of 15', destroyed my service truck two seconds after I got out of it. If I was in it when it exploded I would have surely died.

BR?ND?N - June 11, 2017, 11:52 pm

(Jun 11, 2017 11:08 PM)Stork. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I had a air compressor explode 2 feet away from me in Sept of 15', destroyed my service truck two seconds after I got out of it. If I was in it when it exploded I would have surely died.

Well fuck man. Any hearing loss? Minor injuries? Nothing?

Stork - June 12, 2017, 12:40 am

(Jun 11, 2017 11:52 PM)BR?ND?N Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Well fuck man. Any hearing loss? Minor injuries? Nothing?

Nope got really lucky, ears rang for a few days but nothing past that. The tank flew 30-40 feet in the air from what I'm told, I didn't know what was going on when it happened I just jumped under the combine I was working on.

Cornel- - June 12, 2017, 3:16 am

This is one hell of an incident. Well fortunately (since I have a weak-heart) I wasn't the one who experienced what I am about to describe. This happened with my best friend, Renu.

Renu is married with a 3 years old kid, residing in her hometown Haridwar. Few months after completing her second masters course from Gurgaon, she moved back to Haridwar with her husband and kid. They rented a house instead of moving in with the in-laws because of their giant St. Bernard. Her kid was hardly an year old then.

The day they moved in, they were informed that the landlord's mother passed away a day before due to long term illness of which she was being treated in Delhi. The landlord is a well established businessman and has few properties in and around Haridwar. The landlord's wife informed Renu that his mother was very fond of the house they were living in right now. In fact, she told Renu that the lady chose colors for the walls, designs for tiles etc all by herself particularly for that house and lived in the same till she was taken to Delhi for her treatment. Even during her last days, she kept on insisting on coming back to this house in Haridwar but unfortunately, her wish could not be granted due to her heavy medication required everyday.

New home. Renu and family had been busy settling down in the new house. After a week's time, when they were finally done, Renu took a quick bath and brought dinner into the bedroom. Her husband asked her to wait till he gets freshen up too. While he was in the washroom, Renu heard someone switching on the dining room's tubelight. She was startled for a moment but immediately thought that it was her husband. After he came back to the bedroom, to Renu's surprise her husband asked her if she switched on the dining room's light. Although they assured each other that the place was old so the switched could have gone faulty.

The same week, one night while they were sleeping, both of them were woken up by sudden sound of a wardrobe being opened in the dressing room. They did not move an inch and decided not to get up and look. Next morning when they woke up, the wardrobe was open as they heard but nothing inside had been moved. They ignored it and moved on.

A week later Renu's husband had to go to Delhi for some business meeting and she was alone with her kid that weekend. Without any deny, she was very scared and decided not to switch off the lights of the house that night. Her kid had fallen asleep after dinner and she dozed off as well watching TV. Around 2 AM, she was suddenly woken up by a strange strong vibration. She was scared to death but decided to be strong for she was alone with the kid. She followed the vibration which led her to the washroom, where she saw that the washing machine had been switched on without any clothes in them. She immediately switched it off and returned back to the bedroom but couldn't sleep for the rest of the night.

As soon as her husband arrived the next morning, she told him all about the incident and they decided to hold a Puja (meaning Holy prayer ceremony by a priest). The puja went on successfully and the priest said that such presence is very natural but no harm is intended. The family was relieved for few weeks, but not for long.

One day when Renu was cooking in the kitchen, her husband was off to office and her kid was playing around in the hall, she suddenly heard her kid's jeep turning on and moving (it sounds same as a normal vehicle). Let me tell you that this jeep has 2 modes, the automatic mode in which the jeep would run by the remote control and the other manual mode, in which the driver would drive and control the vehicle. Since her kid was small, the jeep was always kept on automatic mode.

Coming back to the story, Renu ran in the hall and saw her kid standing in a corner of the room and the jeep was being driven by itself! She trembled and looked for the remote control which she found kept over the fridge inside the kitchen. She was scared to death by now. She pulled her son towards her immediately and then observed that the jeep's movement did not look like a case of loose circuit but as if someone was actually driving it! It was moving back and forth and taking turns with horns. Renu gained all her strength, grabbed her phone and made a video of it. (I was cold when I saw the video later!) She immediately called her husband and asked him to come home. He rushed back and saw Renu with their kid outside the house scared to death. He grabbed a log of wood from outside and went inside the house to find that the vehicle was still now. Renu later showed the video and he too was in shock and disbelief. He got the toy checked thoroughly by a mechanic who assured that there was nothing wrong with it.

By now, Renu's husband had started looking for a new place. Renu was absolutely sure of some kind of presence in the house. I remember her telling me that she could feel someone looking at her from the hall or pressure on the bed as if someone just sat on it. Of course it was dangerous, but that time I couldn't help praise her guts for handling such things.

The last incident she told me about before moving out from that place was of when she and her kid were alone one night. She was making the kid eat his meal while watching TV in the bedroom. The kid was playing around and ran into the hall after his ball chanting "mummy, mummy". Suddenly, he came back running to Renu all shocked and pointed at the hall as if he saw something. As soon as Renu turned over to look at the hall, a female's sound chanting "mummy, mummy" came from there. Renu turned cold. She gained her strength again for her kid, and shouted kon hai? (meaning who is it?) and there was absolutely no sound. She did not have the courage to go outside the room and check though, so she simply locked herself with her kid in the bedroom and called her husband. Within the next week, they were out of that place.

All is well in the new place. I wish her and the family peace and happiness.

P.S I had been to her place earlier for a couple of days when she was in the same house but luckily did not come across anything paranormal. Also, I have penned down the most crazy incidents she came across, but the above said is not the complete set of incidents.

lust - June 12, 2017, 5:56 am

When I was a kid a giant dog came at me. Luckily my Mother was able to use a lawn chair to scare it away.

Saney - June 12, 2017, 6:26 am

Was sitting in my car on a small road when a semitruck came in 70mph and passed me just so he didnt collide with the front of my car. He made scratches on my car. Couldn't move before he came and knocked at my window deadsh0t - June 12, 2017, 6:49 am

When i was little think around 7-9 i had a penny in my mouth and it shot into my throad and i was choking on it my mom was upstairs and i couldnt yell finnally i got it out and was freaked as fuck

Caliban - June 12, 2017, 7:32 am

I was swimming in the sea once when i was younger and i got pulled into it by what i think its called "riptide" or smth, i got back just fine however that was a pretty spooky experience. I was like "WTF is going on bruh" dsltesco - June 12, 2017, 7:34 am one time zone hax came into a call and told me I was going to get rooted

V For Vendetta. - June 12, 2017, 7:34 am

Worst thing that ever happened to me was being a member of Apex topkek

MarshalLaw - June 12, 2017, 8:22 am

First time riding dirt bikes with my cousin we were riding around his land, we got to the back part, I was still learning the clutch and i stopped or fucked up somehow and I started to slow down so I just full on stepped on it (or twisted xd). front tire lifted off the ground, almost flipping all the way over, I was near one of their horses too so he almost kicked me in the process lol. I drove away and looked at my cousin and I was like, yeah i meant to do that lol. Best memory with him too.

Regulus - June 12, 2017, 8:23 am

One thing I don't remember was when I was born with a bad heart and had like 10% chance to survive.

Other thing was back in 2007 when I jumped trampoline and my legs got broken, both legs were pointing inside.

That was pretty scary.

IncarnatiOn - June 12, 2017, 11:11 am

I almost died saving someone from drowning.

Wasn't fun but we made it to the shore, my advice is that you never try rescuing someone like that without having a floating piece or something, it was literally a near-death experience.

Adolf Himmler - June 12, 2017, 1:15 pm

(Jun 12, 2017 03:16 AM)Cornel- Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) This is one hell of an incident. Well fortunately (since I have a weak-heart) I wasn't the one who experienced what I am about to describe. This happened with my best friend, Renu.

Renu is married with a 3 years old kid, residing in her hometown Haridwar. Few months after completing her second masters course from Gurgaon, she moved back to Haridwar with her husband and kid. They rented a house instead of moving in with the in-laws because of their giant St. Bernard. Her kid was hardly an year old then.

The day they moved in, they were informed that the landlord's mother passed away a day before due to long term illness of which she was being treated in Delhi. The landlord is a well established businessman and has few properties in and around Haridwar. The landlord's wife informed Renu that his mother was very fond of the house they were living in right now. In fact, she told Renu that the lady chose colors for the walls, designs for tiles etc all by herself particularly for that house and lived in the same till she was taken to Delhi for her treatment. Even during her last days, she kept on insisting on coming back to this house in Haridwar but unfortunately, her wish could not be granted due to her heavy medication required everyday.

New home. Renu and family had been busy settling down in the new house. After a week's time, when they were finally done, Renu took a quick bath and brought dinner into the bedroom. Her husband asked her to wait till he gets freshen up too. While he was in the washroom, Renu heard someone switching on the dining room's tubelight. She was startled for a moment but immediately thought that it was her husband. After he came back to the bedroom, to Renu's surprise her husband asked her if she switched on the dining room's light. Although they assured each other that the place was old so the switched could have gone faulty.

The same week, one night while they were sleeping, both of them were woken up by sudden sound of a wardrobe being opened in the dressing room. They did not move an inch and decided not to get up and look. Next morning when they woke up, the wardrobe was open as they heard but nothing inside had been moved. They ignored it and moved on.

A week later Renu's husband had to go to Delhi for some business meeting and she was alone with her kid that weekend. Without any deny, she was very scared and decided not to switch off the lights of the house that night. Her kid had fallen asleep after dinner and she dozed off as well watching TV. Around 2 AM, she was suddenly woken up by a strange strong vibration. She was scared to death but decided to be strong for she was alone with the kid. She followed the vibration which led her to the washroom, where she saw that the washing machine had been switched on without any clothes in them. She immediately switched it off and returned back to the bedroom but couldn't sleep for the rest of the night.

As soon as her husband arrived the next morning, she told him all about the incident and they decided to hold a Puja (meaning Holy prayer ceremony by a priest). The puja went on successfully and the priest said that such presence is very natural but no harm is intended. The family was relieved for few weeks, but not for long.

One day when Renu was cooking in the kitchen, her husband was off to office and her kid was playing around in the hall, she suddenly heard her kid's jeep turning on and moving (it sounds same as a normal vehicle). Let me tell you that this jeep has 2 modes, the automatic mode in which the jeep would run by the remote control and the other manual mode, in which the driver would drive and control the vehicle. Since her kid was small, the jeep was always kept on automatic mode.

Coming back to the story, Renu ran in the hall and saw her kid standing in a corner of the room and the jeep was being driven by itself! She trembled and looked for the remote control which she found kept over the fridge inside the kitchen. She was scared to death by now. She pulled her son towards her immediately and then observed that the jeep's movement did not look like a case of loose circuit but as if someone was actually driving it! It was moving back and forth and taking turns with horns. Renu gained all her strength, grabbed her phone and made a video of it. (I was cold when I saw the video later!) She immediately called her husband and asked him to come home. He rushed back and saw Renu with their kid outside the house scared to death. He grabbed a log of wood from outside and went inside the house to find that the vehicle was still now. Renu later showed the video and he too was in shock and disbelief. He got the toy checked thoroughly by a mechanic who assured that there was nothing wrong with it.

By now, Renu's husband had started looking for a new place. Renu was absolutely sure of some kind of presence in the house. I remember her telling me that she could feel someone looking at her from the hall or pressure on the bed as if someone just sat on it. Of course it was dangerous, but that time I couldn't help praise her guts for handling such things.

The last incident she told me about before moving out from that place was of when she and her kid were alone one night. She was making the kid eat his meal while watching TV in the bedroom. The kid was playing around and ran into the hall after his ball chanting "mummy, mummy". Suddenly, he came back running to Renu all shocked and pointed at the hall as if he saw something. As soon as Renu turned over to look at the hall, a female's sound chanting "mummy, mummy" came from there. Renu turned cold. She gained her strength again for her kid, and shouted kon hai? (meaning who is it?) and there was absolutely no sound. She did not have the courage to go outside the room and check though, so she simply locked herself with her kid in the bedroom and called her husband. Within the next week, they were out of that place.

All is well in the new place. I wish her and the family peace and happiness.

P.S I had been to her place earlier for a couple of days when she was in the same house but luckily did not come across anything paranormal. Also, I have penned down the most crazy incidents she came across, but the above said is not the complete set of incidents.

Why did you copy-paste it from <https://www.quora.com/Have-you-had-any-scary-experiences-incidents-occur-to-you-How> ?

memzorlor - June 12, 2017, 1:17 pm

I got chased down a street by two fine gentleman with knives who wanted to relieve me of my belongings at 5am after a long shift. I got away by launching myself over a fence and legging it - at the time I was too tired and angry to be bothered but afterwards it was pretty shocking.

MBNH44 - June 12, 2017, 1:19 pm

Saw a man shot 6 times after dropping my (ex)girlfriend home last summer. That was pretty wild almightyhax - June 18, 2017, 7:37 pm

(Jun 12, 2017 07:34 AM)dsltesco Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) one time zone hax came into a call and told me I was going to get rooted and when was this lmfao.

Mr.Peanut - June 18, 2017, 7:42 pm

The first thing that comes to mind is being in a car (on the toll way) that was going 200+ mph. I somehow got it on snap (Snap likes to not show speeds at times when going fast..)

I can think of something much more serious if I tried but meh

funtela - June 18, 2017, 7:45 pm

(Jun 12, 2017 01:15 PM)Adolf Himmler Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Why did you copy-paste it from <https://www.quora.com/Have-you-had-any-scary-experiences-incidents-occur-to-you-How> ?
Lmao nice catch bro :p

chaosxp - November 27, 2021, 11:30 pm

idk tbh same i guess mine was falling off a skateboard

Melted - November 28, 2021, 1:44 pm

When I was younger, I vividly remember not doing the dishes after my mom told me to the hour before. Hearing her stomp up the stairs, that is a real near-death experience.

MavenGradle - November 28, 2021, 2:01 pm

(Jun 12, 2017 08:23 AM)Regulus Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) One thing I don't remember was when I was born with a bad heart and had like 10% chance to survive.

Other thing was back in 2007 when I jumped trampoline and my legs got broken, both legs were pointing inside.

That was pretty scary.

Still having heart troubles or are you healthy now? The reason I bring this up is because I remember feeling the pulse of my mother when she was having an Afib episode and it was probably one of the scariest things to witness/feel. Had to rush her to a doctor because she didn't want to visit a hospital. Her stubbornness almost cost her her life and I should have just not listened to her and taken her to the hospital instead of a doctor. But you can't really say no to someone who is or might be dying.. In the end she was/is fine now, but still. Heart issues and brain issues are incredibly scary to witness or experience.

Regulus - November 28, 2021, 2:06 pm

(Nov 28, 2021 03:01 PM)MavenGradle Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Still having heart troubles or are you healthy now? The reason I bring this up is because I remember feeling the pulse of my mother when she was having an Afib episode and it was probably one of the scariest things to witness/feel. Had to rush her to a doctor because she didn't want to visit a hospital. Her stubbornness almost cost her her life and I should have just not listened to her and taken her to the hospital instead of a doctor. But you can't really say no to someone who is or might be dying.. In the end she was/is fine now, but still. Heart issues and brain issues are incredibly scary to witness or experience.

Still have it from time to time.

And damn buddy, I am so extremely sorry to hear that, I am the same, I never wanna go to hospital but my mom forces me to do it whenever I feel bad.

And that has probably saved my life a couple of times :/

Damn mate I am here if you ever need someone to talk to <3
For real.

MavenGradle - November 28, 2021, 2:10 pm

(Nov 28, 2021 03:06 PM)Regulus Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Still have it from time to time.

And damn buddy, I am so extremely sorry to hear that, I am the same, I never wanna go to hospital but my mom forces me to do it whenever I feel bad.

And that has probably saved my life a couple of times :/

Damn mate I am here if you ever need someone to talk to <3

For real.

Likewise. Health is an important attribute in life that most people simply overlook. It's sad. Science will probably be able to fix all these issues a hundred or so years from now but in the meanwhile people are just stuck living with things that make some days a living hell on earth.

Take care, and never lose hope. Cristiano Ronaldo has a bad heart too, and he did amazing things (depending on who you ask) despite of his heart and he's going to be remembered for quite a while. That's true courage and persistence though, putting through, even if life deals you a bad hand of cards. I hope fortune favors you as well.

Regulus - November 28, 2021, 2:13 pm

(Nov 28, 2021 03:10 PM)MavenGradle Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Likewise. Health is an important attribute in life that most people simply overlook. It's sad. Science will probably be able to fix all these issues a hundred or so years from now but in the meanwhile people are just stuck living with things that make some days a living hell on earth.

Take care, and never lose hope. Cristiano Ronaldo has a bad heart too, and he did amazing things (depending on who you ask) despite of his heart and he's going to be remembered for quite a while. That's true courage and persistence though, putting through, even if life deals you a bad hand of cards. I hope fortune favors you as well.

Could not have put those word more fitting than you just did.

Life is like a roller coaster, up and down.

You're a wise person, never ever doubt yourself. <3

7777777 - November 28, 2021, 4:14 pm

I was walking to this shed to fill up a bucket of water and from about 100m away I saw this massive oak tree collapse onto the shed. would have been me if I wasnt such a slow walker.

Orb - November 28, 2021, 7:18 pm

(Nov 28, 2021 03:01 PM)MavenGradle Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Still having heart troubles or are you healthy now? The reason I bring this up is because I remember feeling the pulse of my mother when she was having an Afib episode and it was probably one of the scariest things to witness/feel. Had to rush her to a doctor because she didn't want to visit a hospital. Her stubbornness almost cost her her life and I should have just not listened to her and taken her to the hospital instead of a doctor. But you can't really say no to someone who is or might be dying.. In the end she was/is fine now, but still. Heart issues and brain issues are incredibly scary to witness or experience.

It really is one of the scariest things, how were you able to keep your cool and not panic? My grandma had a stroke about 2 months ago, I went to see them after work that day and when I walked in she was completely paralysed on one side and non responsive. My grandpa was holding her up on the chair while crying and panicing. He's 89, for some reason he didn't have the reflex to call 911. Just really glad I walked in that day on the right time cause if it took longer before she got rushed to the hospital the damage could be a lot worse.

LOUD - November 28, 2021, 7:39 pm

Most terrifying experience for me was a few years back when I crashed my dirtbike while hanging a wheelie (at about 50mph)

I broke my wrist completely and tore my ACL.

After a year of 2 major surgeries and the pandemic hitting I am doing a lot better in my life. <3

MavenGradle - November 29, 2021, 4:05 am

(Nov 28, 2021 08:18 PM)Frsh Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It really is one of the scariest things, how were you able to keep your cool and not panic? My grandma had a stroke about 2 months ago, I went to see them after work that day and when I walked in she was completely paralysed on one side and non responsive. My grandpa was holding her up on the chair while crying and panicing. He's 89, for some reason he didn't have the reflex to call 911. Just really glad I walked in that day on the right time cause if it took longer before she got rushed to the hospital the damage could be a lot worse.

Keeping your cool is difficult in situations like these. Emotions can make you unreasonable or do some very illogical things. Knowing what's going on is extremely helpful, though. Assess what might be going on, validate it and act on it as quickly as you can. Understanding the dangers of the situation you find yourself in, even if it doesn't involve you, can help tremendously.

When you realize that you're effectively powerless against the will of nature and the human body, the only thing you can do, is to take them to someone who CAN help. It's one thing to cry about what's going on, but crying doesn't solve any problems no matter how difficult it might be (and this might sound a bit heartless but really, it's meant as a slap on the face to wake up and do something).

Most of us are not equipped to deal with heart attacks, strokes, etc since we have no medical training. Perhaps we've had some first aid course through our work, but still. The odds of survival from doing CPR, for example, are extremely low outside of a hospital (but it's still better than doing nothing).

You can, in the end, only hope for the best. We're not doctors (most of us anyway), and even if it might be the last time you see someone breathing and standing, realize that you have the power and ability to help them, by taking them to the proper care agencies. It sucks, but that is the way of life. One moment you're fine and watching television, the next you're convulsing on the floor or unable to speak. Going through a situation like that helps you out too as a person, in understanding the value of life and how fickle it is and how things aren't always in our control.

One day it will be you or I who's going to need that help, and I hope that the people around us know what they're doing or know their own limitations and ask for others when needed. Best of luck to you my friend.

Livewire - November 29, 2021, 6:24 am

Not me but my brother was hanging out with some friends and they were playing and checking out their guns. One of the guys there was passed back the handgun not knowing it had been loaded and put it to his own head and blew out his brains.

I'm sure that had to be horrible to witness honestly.

Lrrr - December 6, 2021, 5:50 pm

I was hit by a drunk driving while riding a motorcycle and lost the use of my right pinky finger

Nate - December 7, 2021, 12:54 am

Being in jail for a dui worse experience in my life

bevc - December 7, 2021, 1:30 am

(Nov 28, 2021 03:01 PM)MavenGradle Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) The reason I bring this up is because I remember feeling the pulse of my mother when she was having an Afib episode and it was probably one of the scariest things to witness/feel. Had to rush her to a doctor because she didn't want to visit a hospital. Her stubbornness almost cost her her life and I should have just not listened to her and taken her to the hospital instead of a doctor. But you can't really say no to someone who is or might be dying.. In the end she was/is fine now, but still. Heart issues and brain issues are incredibly scary to witness or experience.

My mother was an alcoholic and when I was a kid, about 9 or 10 or something, she had a fit, she collapsed, was spewing up blood, that was a terrifying life experience. She's dead now, but had lots of incidents like that. I hope your mum is ok, that shit is scary.

I once nearly suffocated in my sleep when the room was filling with poison gas, I managed to get out of bed and stick my head out of the window. Although that wasn't as scary as it sounds, it was only later when the guy who came to fix it told me how close I came to dying.

I nearly died drinking a couple of times (falling down smashing my head, choking on vomit etc), but I don't remember those too well.

Simon77 - December 7, 2021, 5:22 am

(Jun 11, 2017 10:22 PM)BR?ND?N Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Well I had a car going around 60, coming straight at me because I accidentally ran into the street. They slammed their brakes and the front end was inches from me.

Another time was when I got stabbed. Which was probably the most exhilarating moment of my life. It happened quickly, but I never had that kind of fear before. When you're walking, and you get a gut feeling there is someone following you, only to turn around and be swung at. It's fun.

Only real times my life was in danger. Had a few gun threats in school, have had kids threaten to kill me etc, however none of them did anything and I'm cool with most of those kids now ?

Oh man I know this post was made like 3 years ago but I read it now and damn only reading this made me terrified. How did you handle all that, especially the stab? Did it injure you seriously?

wyvn - December 7, 2021, 5:36 am nothing really terrifying happens in my life to be honest but something insane and terrifying happened to me and a few friends recently so me and two friends were pulling into a car park, just as some, well lets call them "friends that we had some issues with" were leaving that same car park, and so these "friends" spotted us in the car park.

now these "friends" of ours, also had some new friends who didnt like the fact that we were in the car park and had "problems" with their friends, so they chased me and my boys in the car and i had to drive away and evade dont get me wrong, after i knew he was chasing me i blasted the hardest cutting up tunes i could think of out my speakers, i love driving fast and through traffic, so that with the addition of someone chasing me just gave me 100x more adrenaline.

He successfully managed to pull in front of me a good 5 times as his car was faster than mine, however all 5 times i managed to juke him and get around him, not to brag but pretty trash driver nowhere near my skill.

then, after his final attempt at pulling me over, i realized i had enough space to turn around and go the other way, so i did that, and he left us alone. never saw em again then we went and smoked many marijuana's to chill out while i forced my friends to promise to never call me a bad driver again ?

ngl tho, was terrifying, but a fun and exciting night.

2xTheTap115 - December 7, 2021, 8:12 am

Well ... I once saw a car hit a guy speeding to 120 km / h. This guy did three flips in the air and then hit his head on the ground, twisting his neck. Unfortunately, the guy died on the spot?

blackrose_x0x0 - December 7, 2021, 11:08 am

Interesting thread. I saw a lot of horrible things in Afghanistan in 2010. I usually never share anything about my experiences over there but there was one instant that has stuck with me over the years and in my dreams.

Long story short we were on a patrol mission and the second humvee hit an IDE. My friend who I went to basic training with was in that vehicle. We spent a lot of time together on base and in town before we were deployed. I even got to witness that guy lose his virginity, it was glorious. RIP my friend. When it happened, I was on the .50 cal on the humvee 2 behind them, so I saw everything. I was 19 years old at the time and I believe that moment changed me forever. Our medics ended up saving one of them but regardless I'll never get that image of the aftermath out of my head.

Monero-chan - December 7, 2021, 11:26 am

There was a serial killer in an apartment complex near where I used to live (this was years ago), saw him getting headshotted by the cops since he held someone with a knife to their neck creating a hostage situation and won't cooperate with the cops. Shit was surreal as fuck.

numik3k - June 15, 2023, 4:31 am

Some electrical thing exploded outside my house on new years day 2022

ChronoBiff - August 3, 2023, 6:02 pm

I still don't know whether or not I believe if you're being serious or not.