Thread: Thread Ratings Bug

thales - June 12, 2017, 3:25 pm

If you spam click on the thread rating you're trying to add, you're able to add a rating twice.

Tried with zero success.

Anyway, even if it is a bug, thread ratings means nothing anyway and this doesn't seem like something that someone will abuse enough with to abuse.

Staffs can see thread ratings by viewing this page. And If someone would be to abuse it somehow, they'll surely deal with it.

Even if this did exist ratings don't really mean anything and it's probably a bug with myBB - something that Omni wouldn't change.

I just did it. I would record it, but I exceeded my 24 hour allowance after failing to record it several times.

I'm getting an error?

It'll give you an error but if you click fast enough you can see it rates it twice before the error pops up.

You could install Xerotic's HFUP which has a feature that shows how many ratings a thread has along with it's average.

@Mr Kewl don't listen to drunken Steve. HF is the best at its original state. No userscripts.

- 1.) I'm not drunk, but you just gave me the idea to go buy a bottle of whiskey.
- 2.) Xerotic is a great coder.
- 3.) It'd only be enabled temporarily for testing purposes.

If you hover over the thread rating after rating it yourself, you can see it as well.

Some who rated this thread succeeded, some didn't. I cannot click that fast even tho I was destroying my left mouse button.

Thanks for pointing it out.
