Sold all my alts and invested a total of 2000$ in Antshares @ 3.1$ per coin a few days ago. It's currently sitting at 4.20$ already and has a huge conference coming up in 3 days. It's China's first ever original and open source public chain project, has a ton of partnerships (Microsoft, Alibaba, MobileGo), allegedly has the government behind their back and is similar to Ethereum + has an amazing dev team. It has not been added to Poloniex yet but even on the slower days it has enough volume to start competing with the top 10 cryptocurrencies. What are your thoughts on this coin?

<https://coinmarketcap.com/currencies/antshares/>

<https://github.com/AntShares/AntShares/wiki/Whitepaper-1.1>

Some questions that got answered on bitcointalk by other people.

1) Why the sudden price surge?

It is quite simple.....the implementation of Smart Contracts 2.0 is in the very near future (might coincide with the conference in five days time). Those who speculate on the price likely consider Antshares to have everything it needs to compete with the very best of cryptocurrencies. It has better scalability and efficiency than Bitcoin/Ethereum without the chance of forking the network, whilst at the same time having Know Your Customer (KYC) options built into the network which makes it suitable for use by businesses in China and by extension the global community. I think the lack of the KYC options that most cryptocurrencies have actually allows various regulators to crack down on them. So in short it seems perhaps the very best cryptocurrency platform to conduct legal business on. If they ensure low and competitive transaction costs and clear information for international users (they are working on this last matter), then they can take out Bitcoin and Ethereum. Ali Baba will be bigger than the economies of France and the UK in 20 years. That goes for a lot of its industries, including Antshares. Just wait and see when China and Russia together with many other nations start taking away the power of the USD as global reserve currency. The perception of wealth will move along with it to the East.

2) Why was the project dead for a year?

It was not dead. It seems to me that Antshares has different priorities. They were developing their project instead of mostly devoting their time to hyping as many Western cryptocurrencies do such as Iota, Stratis and many others. They thought things through at China's elite universities first. Antshares is already better than Ethereum in its setup. The Chinese market will outclass all other markets in the world and the Antshares team has enough shares locked up to enter into all kinds of joint ventures and thereby further build value for Antshare holders.

3) Why is the transaction fee so high?

ANS transactions don't have decimals, if you trade in decimals they will just be lost.

/edit: up 2k in like 48 hours, feelsgoodman

Patriot - June 18, 2017, 4:49 pm

I know this isn't a major issue, but not being able to send in decimals WILL have a negative impact on this coin in the future. A lot of people didn't realize this when sending to the wallet and lost some. Hopefully this is fixable in the future.

Glad to see someone else on the hypetrain. I think the price will skyrocket an insane amount once more people hear about it. I'm in it for long term but i'll try selling atleast half of my Antshares at the absolute PEAK i can after the conference. Then rebuy when it has dipped a bit, worth a shot IMO.

What are your plans?

mybankisemptyy - June 18, 2017, 5:34 pm

I bought in at 3.90 I heard 2 late about it :(

But like you said pretty short term investment after the conference I will sell most of it. Although i've seen people claim this will be the chinese eth...

$6.26 right now... congratz on your $2k profit:)

Bro im so tempted to sell it all right now. It's 7.10$ demand on bittrex. Holy shit. Thanks! GL on your profits too.

Yeah, but I can see the real price at the Yunbi exchange. It's 5.66$ for the Chinese people. The 7$ value seems to be only on Bittrex which means it's heavily getting pumped right now by people from NA/EU.

edit: lol, dumped 100 @ 7.12$, bought 100 back in at 6.59$.

Glad to hear. I got about 200$ doing the same thing, sold at 6.9-7, bought back at 6.2-6.3 like 2 times on bittrex. Also my 2000$ Antshares investment went 200% ROI in like 48 hours and I expect it to raise even more in 3-4 days up until the conference.

Eli29 - June 18, 2017, 10:25 pm

Looks pretty legit. I got in at around $6, and I think it's gonna keep going up in anticipation for the conference on the 22nd.

Here are some facts about Antshares found on its subreddit.

ANS was developed by a company called Onchain, based in Shanghai. Da Hongfei is the CEO of Onchain as well as the creator of Antshares Antshares has some high profile partners listed on its site, including Wings, Alibaba, and Microsoft.

The collaboration with Wings is an R&D partnership. From Wings's press release: "The strategic cooperation enables European and North American DAO projects to tap the Chinese cryptocurrency community, and Chinese start-ups to do the same with European and North American communities. Further, the two organizations agree to coordinate resources on mutual business opportunities, and promote joint hackathons to drive ecosystem innovation."

The collaboration with Microsoft relates to Microsoft Azure, specifically a legal blockchain project of some kind.

The Alibaba collaboration entails a partnership between ONCHAIN and Ali Cloud working on "proof-of-existence for a blockchain-powered email evidence repository as a bottom-layer framework designed for enterprise-level use.

Antshares is also partnered with Bancor

Despite the similarities in name and logo, Antshares is not connected or affiliated with Ant Financial, Alibaba's fintech spinoff, as far as I can tell. Ant Financial has created at least one blockchain thing of its own.

Reps from Antshares have attended at least one government-sponsored industry conference on blockchain. It also appears Antshares held a blockchain competition in collaboration with a committee of the Shanghai municipal government (on antshares official site). However, from my own experience with China I would caution readers not to assume this means anything at all. I haven't seen anything yet that suggests Antshares is "backed" or "endorsed" by the Chinese government as some people on here have claimed.

I'm pretty sure it will stay around the same price range. It will rise even more up until the conference and then dips back to 6$ or so. I'm no expert but I feel a raise this high has to be corrected sooner or later.

I'd say it will reach more than that. Circulating supply is half of ETH and the value is currently like 60x times less. Given a year, this can easily reach in the hundreds if marketed properly. Chinese markets are going crazy at the moment, that volume is insane compared to a day or two ago. We are going to surpass stratis in the next few days or even today lol. It's being pumped so hard on bittrex right now, it's funny, over a 1.50$ difference with chinese markets.

It's pretty exciting man. I heard they're rebranding the hell out of it too, because people think the name and logo don't seem professional enough. The news of that was enough to spike the price up too

I'm actually not sure if it's something NEW, or if it's going to be new to those they'll be telling it to. It's probably just like Ethereum, but they're bringing it to China.

Gameh3x - June 19, 2017, 3:26 pm

It's the smart contracts 2.0 platform, the "new" technology you are all talking about. What is a smart contract? Popularity is that you can do some logical programming. If it is a complete virtual machine Turing, then the smart contract theory can be any complex logic programming. The recent little ants introduced the Smart Contract 2.0, which is a smart contract system different from the etherbase, fabric and other block chains. The biggest feature of Smart Contract 2.0 is that developers do not have to learn new intelligent contract language, directly using their own familiar Java, C / C #, Go and other programming languages for intelligent contract development. Do you know what that means? Smart contract 2.0 can dock the global millions of developers community, is conducive to the rapid formation of a huge smart contract ecology. At the same time, Smart Contract 2.0 also has a lightweight, stack-based virtual machine (smart contract running on a virtual machine) with independent research and development, with the "deterministic call tree" technology, can achieve theoretically unlimited scalability. In addition, C # compiler has been completed, you can use it to write ants in C # smart contract, that is, developers can now start to develop application case. Immersed Smart Contract 2.0 White Paper is prepared, divided into nine sections, plus contract types, virtual machines, high-level languages, and so on. Just do some research on it before stuffing all your money on it like sheep. 2 grand into 8k in 72 hours, the feels.

Probably just advancements over the systems that currently exist. It's kind of like Stratis in that it lets developers code in C#, among other languages.

And the fact that it's in China certainly helps it. It's as if they want their own version of Ether and are placing their bets on Antshares.

Give it some time, but honestly the trend similar to yesterday so there's nothing to worry.

I bought in really early, so I'll be holding it.

I followed my gut on this one and hopped off this coin before the conference.

Gluteus Maximus - June 22, 2017, 7:46 am

I'll still be holding this, the conference went really well and this is just a panic sell manipulated by the whales. I have nothing to lose on this coin since I bought in early.

Even if NEO isn't better than ETH, its Chinese and that's all that matters to get adopted by the Chinese.

Watch the Throne - June 22, 2017, 8:30 am

Neo - formerly known as Antshares - is going to continue to go up in time. There's no reason for the price drop after the conference. The only thing that came out of the conference was good news. There was nothing negative that would cause a massive panic for everybody to sell out. It's just the weak hands and/or whales trying to manipulate things. Remember, this is a Chinese based crypto, so I'm sure there are quite a few whales over there capable of fucking with things.

BTC, ETH, LTC, none of them explode after news from one conference. This coin has been around for two years and is just now gaining traction. I bought in when it was around $1.5 - the only reason I bought in at that time was because of all the news with the Korean markets and such playing such a huge role. So I wanted to see if China had a big player coin coming out of that corner of the world - turns out they did! So I tossed about $1k at it and plan to let it sit for a long time.

There are some great goals in place here and I think they are very reachable. Anybody who was looking for a quick buck missed the boat. Price shot up to $13/14 this past week. That would have been the time to hop out and I know a lot of people did so before and after that peak. For those of us who didn't even bother selling anything, well down. Set it, forget it and follow/encourage the NEO team where you can.

Oh man, it's just completely tanking. Why did these retards have to care so much about the name...

Do you guys think there's any chance of recovery?

Ya Habibi - June 22, 2017, 5:56 pm

AntShares is merely readjusting. You need to take into consideration that one week ago this coin was significantly lower around $3. AntShares, now Neocoin, represents China's own coin comparable to Ethereum.

Prior to the conference yesterday this coin was hyped way too much. The market for this coin will stabilise around $8 and then, over time, will gradually increase.

For those who wanted to be in it for the short term, the ship has sailed. It's long term from here.

I expect to see this coin at $50 in a few months.

It's tanking because it was overhyped and people are cashing out on their profits. People thought the conference was going to have groundbreaking news to show major microsoft/alibaba/govt support when it was just to introduce the coin and rebrand.

People had a misunderstanding as to what the conference was for. It was an introduction for the coin and to educate potential partners/investors as to why it was created and what it's future goal was.

There wasn't supposed to be any "real" changes. This is just the beginning for the coin to gain traction with a rebrand to show it's new direction. It shows they're putting more thought into the coin and they realize the name "Antshares" isn't really that catchy. Thus "NEO" was born.

I'll quote you now because I believe you are wrong. You show a degree of ignorance in your comments. Here is an excerpt that outlines the future of NEO.Spoiler \(Click to View\)

I bought AntShares (NEO) at 25 cents and never sold a single one. In fact, I kept buying more, even when they were $1.50, $3 and so forth... I will continue to buy them and hold, here is why.

I have lived in China for 7 years and don't get me wrong, I love China but that is not the reason why I bought AntShares. I bought AntShares because I know the Chinese will use AntShares over any other foreign asset, regardless of its statue. Like Benjamin Graham says "Individual investors own three times more assets in their local company than in all other companies combined."

Here are some foreign struggles.

Walmart struggles in China.

Uber failed in China, sells to competitor Didi

Facebook , Google, Twitter, Ebay, Paypal, I could go on and on...

It is not because a company is censored, or because of politics. It is merely because the world does not understand China and China's economy... China dominates as having some of the largest companies in the entire world, yet most of you have never heard of them. How did these Chinese companies achieve so much success without you even noticing? Maybe you did notice, but was not aware it was owned by China.

Here are some massive Chinese companies

Banks: ICBC, China Construction Bank, Agricultural Bank of China, Bank of China, ABC Bank
Tencent Just Passed Wells Fargo as the World's 10th Biggest Company in the world. (Forbes)

Alibaba - Biggest IPO in the worlds history. (Alibaba, Alipay, Taobao)

China's Huawei 'Growing Up' To Become The World's No. 1 ... (Forbes)

Baidu - China's search engine / app platform.

JD.com - Massive online retailer.

Most people dont even know what 'WeChat' (by Tencent) is, yet it generates more revenue per year than Facebook! When it comes to Chinese assets, you need to understand they can become the largest companies in the world, without any international support.

Now don't get me wrong, Foreign companies can still be successful in China, if they are marketed and properly executed. A foreign company can obtain a 20% marketshare in China and feel successful, but who controls the other 80%? China. If Ethereum gained a 20% marketshare in China, investors may see this as a "success". While AntShares (Neo) obtains an 80% marketshare in China and then goes after the rest of the world. Success comes from investing in undervalued companies.

China is very technologically advanced and is moving at a fast pace. Paying for goods digitally (with phones) has been around for years and is the most preferred and used method. Because many Chinese still work low wages and long hours, most will learn anything to send/receive money, even if it requires a little research. The infrastructure, willingness to learn and the ability to adapt in China is already setup for mass adoption with digital technology. In fact, it makes the west look like it's in the past.

Now I wont tell anyone they should buy AntShares (NEO), only you can make this decision. The best investment you can make is investing in yourself. You should research, follow up and then research more.. The more knowledge you have, the more likely you are to make good intelligent decisions.

What do I personally think will happen to AntShares you may ask? Here is how I see it... I wont invest in a company unless I can imagine it still being around in 20 years. I wont invest in a company that I don't understand, because if I cant understand it.. how can I give it an evaluation? And I certainly wont invest in anything unless I feel it can survive a 'worst case scenario'.. When I was evaluating AntShares I felt this is a winner, and I still do. If AntShares can survive a worst case scenario, and if I believe AntShares will still be around in 10 or 20 years... Then I have no doubt AntShares will take many people to the moon!

I hope this gives a lot of people a better understanding of what they are dealing with here, and potentially how lucky they are to know about AntShares (NEO) to begin with. If it wasn't for Coinmarketcap and Bittrex,... AntShares (NEO) would take off to the moon, and you wouldn't even know until a million Chinese were already on the moon. To be honest, its a privilege to have access to this asset and I look forward to its growth ahead.

Don't die a traders death.

Well I sold only a chunk of strats for ans, I still believe in strat.

Just ans will be a strong competitor, or atleast be the main one for china.

It has a smaller marketcap > bigger ROI potential.

Hopefully it'll become as big as I think it wil..

I've been saying ETH/Strat/Ans/lisk will be the main blockchains since ans was still some cents ?

So antcoins will become the equivalent of gas in ethereum. Antshares may not be the best coin to invest in now for quick profit since nothing will happen for a while. It would be good to invest in NEO (Antshares rebrand) when it comes out though (or right before).

If you want to be taken seriously you should probably explain your position by using the hierarchy of reason and evidence. Making assumptions by looking at a chart and giving blank statements of nothingness is hardly that. Its only your own 2 cents or whatever it may be worth to anyone and nothing more. Imagine the people who invested hundreds/thousands at $9+

Antshares has been on a major downward trend for days now with no signs of stopping. It's been breaking support line one after another with strong resistance. Current price is ~$5.5 so that's nearly half of people's investments gone if you got in at $9. Then there are many others that got in higher because ANS reached $15 ATH. People are giving up because they don't want to lose any more money.

ANTshares was valued under $0.55 for the last 3 years, why on earth would it recover from this pump/dump? People who hold past this time (The point of no return) are going to regret holding in hopes of recovering their lost money. The coin has no practical use, other than to dupe noob traders out of their money via market manipulation.

1. Why would a communist country want decentralized digital assets when they're trying to keep money inside the country? The issue with China's richest right now is maintaining the value and security of their assets so they're investing elsewhere (property and kids abroad).

2. Chinese government has put a freeze on cryptos in the past and can do it again. It doesn't matter what it's citizens think about cryptos, but rather what the government thinks and this stance shows they view cryptos as a threat.

3. Every coin can be said to have the "potential" to increase. That doesn't mean that it will. The nature of Antshares was for it to stay at a relatively low price that is affordable for everyone hence the no decimal rule. It makes the coin easier and simpler, but if the price increases too much, then the sending fees would eat a person alive. You can counter that with suggesting Antcoins generated from holding ANS solves this issue and allows sending decimals, but that only increases the value of ANS even further. An average person isn't going to be able to afford 1 ANS as people hang onto ANS to generate more Antcoins. How would such a coin be implemented into Alipay or Paypal (for comparison)? There's a reason why it was valued under $.55 for 3 years before the hype. Paying/receiving $.5 is a lot easier to part with vs. $10 per purchase.

What's happening right now is a major correction while confidence in ANS dies out and everyone is selling out to prevent loss. It's annoying to constantly see people advising others to HODL without any clear explanations as to why other than trying to keep confidence so the price doesn't dip further. It's false hope in the end and completely foolish

By that logic any coin that has a pump and dump is destined to fail?

Awkward moment where every coin in existence has been pumped.

2. It wasn't government sponsored. It was organized as a briefing and introduction to the coin and why it was created, held at Microsoft. Does it make sense to hold a government-sponsored conference at an international company's building? No.

3.That's the reason why it's dying so hard. Because the actual value for it being implemented into Alipay/China is below $1. If I went to the grocery store and paid in ANS, lets say I'm buying $10.90 worth of vegetables.

-Scenario 1: ANS is worth $1 meaning I'd pay with 11 ANS totaling $11

Ignorance is bliss. Though I believe you have a very valid, well thought argument, I believe you are ignoring the fact that ethereum uses a similar system with gas and it has remained as a very successful coin up to now, and it sits at over $300 in value per coin. I do agree that ANS or ethereum could eventually face hard problems with this system.

Also what you mentioned about China shutting down crypto trading, you also have to realize that our government (if you live in the US) will sometimes shut down the stock market, which is comparable to crypto currency. Though I'm not saying it WILL happen, it is possible that once more people in the US gain awareness about crypto currency, the government could do similar things to what chinas government does with crypto currency.

On a further note I don't have anything invested into this coin but if the price drops a little bit more I will consider investing.

Hopefully you understand these reasons as to why the previous users still invested in ANS though they may not have been able to give a complete explanation for it.

That moment when your post turns into a battlefield. Literally, just be patient and dont get "tilted" by others so easily if you believe in the project. After all everyone is allowed to have their own opinion. Just wait for the rebranding to be complete because that's currently their main focus and we'll see where it goes from there. Of course the price is going to dip, did you see the prices on different markets when it was going up fast? I believe it got up to an insane 15$ value on Bittrex which clearly shows it was overhyped by people who were not Chinese since the prices on Yunbi managed to stay at 45-55 CNY which totals to 6.5-8$. I used the opportunity to sell half of mine during the peak. I didn't manage to sell at 15$ but I sold a decent bit at 11.70-12$. Currently holding 482 Antshares long term, bought in at 3.10$.

Though I'm not saying it WILL happen, it is possible that once more people in the US gain awareness about crypto currency, the government could do similar things to what chinas government does with crypto currency.

On a further note I don't have anything invested into this coin but if the price drops a little bit more I will consider investing.

Hopefully you understand these reasons as to why the previous users still invested in ANS though they may not have been able to give a complete explanation for it.

The difference though is that ETH can be sent with decimals so the price doesn't really matter

Let the haters hate. I guess we shall see :). I will do me and you do you is all I can say. The hierarchy of reason and evidence are clearly not the greatest of their strengths considering what we have witnessed here so far. I can't take them too serious personally. All I see is negative speculation but nothing that actually backs up what they are saying. Can't be bothered wasting my time on it beyond this point anymore... its kinda laughable and just drama BS tbh. They clearly have not done their homework pertaining to the project. If they don't like antshares they don't have to. Love em anyway even if all they can do is spew toxicity and make misinformed statements. Whatever :p..... no skin off my back but it certainly feels like a waste of time even responding to such unsubstantiated gibberish. We will come back to this post next year and lets see how all this panned out ;). I am pretty sure they wont be commenting by then. We will see :). Cheers and GL to all who are staying and holding! I have not invested yet but will be very soon.

I'd never do as good a job as Shana summing this coin up.

(Jun 25, 2017 11:18 AM)???? Shana Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) 1. Why would a communist country want decentralized digital assets when they're trying to keep money inside the country? The issue with China's richest right now is maintaining the value and security of their assets so they're investing elsewhere (property and kids abroad).

2. Chinese government has put a freeze on cryptos in the past and can do it again. It doesn't matter what it's citizens think about cryptos, but rather what the government thinks and this stance shows they view cryptos as a threat.

3. Every coin can be said to have the "potential" to increase. That doesn't mean that it will. The nature of Antshares was for it to stay at a relatively low price that is affordable for everyone hence the no decimal rule. It makes the coin easier and simpler, but if the price increases too much, then the sending fees would eat a person alive. You can counter that with suggesting Antcoins generated from holding ANS solves this issue and allows sending decimals, but that only increases the value of ANS even further. An average person isn't going to be able to afford 1 ANS as people hang onto ANS to generate more Antcoins. How would such a coin be implemented into Alipay or Paypal (for comparison)? There's a reason why it was valued under $.55 for 3 years before the hype. Paying/receiving $.5 is a lot easier to part with vs. $10 per purchase.

What's happening right now is a major correction while confidence in ANS dies out and everyone is selling out to prevent loss. It's annoying to constantly see people advising others to hold without any clear explanations as to why other than trying to keep confidence so the price doesn't dip further. It's false hope in the end and completely foolish

The coin needs to be low to be able to serve its purpose, don't get me wrong I wanted the coin to keep going up but then it'd be of no real use. If that was the case I'm sure the developers would just increase total coins in circulation which would make the price plummet. I'm no expert and my opinion is only an opinion. I could be wrong and those who held could be filthy rich in the next few months.

You guys whining about antshares, antshares are SHARES, you get paid for securing the blockchain with antcoins.

These antcoins are used to fuel blockchain usage. thanks

Stratis pretty much does the same, don't see anyone crying about that.

They want bitcoin to be the currency, strats are just to secure/fuel the blockchain.

Not really intended to be a currency.

I knew it would hit 5-6 dollars, but i believe this is the floor. As long as you dont sell when you are down than you arent losing. Just wait when all chinese coins start writing on the ANS chain it will go up. Im not worried about any of my coins because i invest in strong coins. Its just a matter of time thats all. To many get rich quick kids on the market right now. Just HODL and you wont regret it. Sure u can make a few bucks day trading sometimes, but you only get rich if you long term coins. Pretty much. He can have his own opinion but if he is so self righteous about it and on his high horse then maybe he should also be able to back up what he is saying with actual logic. He doesn't seem to respond in a constructive or positive way when people disagree with him that is for sure. Instead he becomes hostile and will go as far as giving people -ve feedback. Whatever I guess....

I guess it upset him that some people don't think like he does. I have no issue with him being in disagreement but I am curious about the logic behind his conclusions to say the very least. At the end of the day what any of us are saying are only our own 2 cents for whatever it is worth. I do try to base what I am saying on facts and what I have researched however as much as I possibly can. Of course that doesn't mean that I will always get it right. Apparently some people's word should be treated as gospel and nobody better dare question them. Humility seems foreign to some people. They just can never be wrong.

Yes ANS took a big dip but this is the case for the overall market right now. Yes there were whales that pumped it but this is also the case for many coins. He clearly has not researched the project or bothered to look into it at all. I just don't understand the hostility I guess. But yeh whatever. I jumped at the opportunity when ANS took a dive last night and invested in a few. I believe the project has great potential. I wish I could have jumped in earlier of course but I am planning on holding on to this one for a while. Good luck to all who invested into this one! cheers

Hmm yeh weird after synching my wallet which took quite some time my transaction was almost instant. There is a file of the blockchain you can download and throw into the folder to speed up the process of the synching I believe.

Heads up; it came true without doing anything. It was the delay I talked about before. Not sure why there is a delay though. Need to look further in this.

Thanks for your help.

No probs mate I am happy to help out wherever I can. Just encountered my first bug with the antshares wallet today and contacted the developers and let them know about it and sent them some ideas for future consideration for the gui and ease of use ideas etc. The wallet needs a lot of work but its all work in progress.

PS for anyone who needs any help here is a good writeup that may come in handy...

https://www.reddit.com/r/Antshares/comments/6j8pcp/a_basic_guide_to_the_antshares_pc_wallet/

And if anyone comes across this bug in the wallet where the confirmation gets stuck after trying to claim your ant coins.... here is the answer for now....

<https://bitcoin.stackexchange.com/questions/9046/why-is-my-transaction-not-getting-confirmed-and-what-can-i-do-about-it>

I also recommend backing up your chains folder after you have fully synched with the network. That way if anything happens in the future you can throw the file in there after a new install and synch from what you already had completed in the past and you will be back on track much faster. Make sure you back up your database file of your wallet and write down all keys for your wallet addresses on paper and maybe also take screenshots of everything and back all that up on USB and a couple of harddrives or something. Better safe than sorry! cheers all Antshares is very good to trade using stochastic indicators, so I am accumulating with that. 5-10% moves in 5-30 minutes is good.

Ok well we will see I guess. Either way I benefit with a lesson learned (or not) and more money in my crypto pocket. Antshares have been good to me in the last week of troubled times. I will be surprised (and pleased) if they break away again more significantly than the rest of the pack.

Dammit, I'll keep an eye on the price. If I feel like I'm running out of time I'll all in.

Think it will level out a bit after the network? Would it be worth selling for some short term profit and buying in again after?

"before conference ATH" was yesterday, like 3 days before it, not 2 days like it was last time.

since yesterday's ATH we have a slowly dip, it has highs too, but these highs will be lower and lower.

and imo in a long run, it's a good healthy thing.

let it grow slowly. because in a few or several months there will be a huge lift off, similar to ETH one.

also if you got more than few ANS just put them in your wallet, then sell your ANC at best price and buy more ANS more ANS = more ANC = more ANS ect..
