

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Closed

Zens - June 18, 2017, 11:48 pm

This thread is closed. Cheers

Copywriter - June 18, 2017, 11:49 pm

It's definitely improved, keep going man!
Keep on learning.

Zens - June 19, 2017, 12:07 am

(Jun 18, 2017 11:49 PM)Copywriter Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It's definitely improved, keep going man!
Keep on learning.
Thank you sir. ?

Debugger - June 19, 2017, 12:10 am well that's really nice & yes u can improve ur skills more

Good Luck!

TheChi?f - June 19, 2017, 12:12 am

It looks awful. I don't know why you are using that background fill in the text...

M?xim - June 19, 2017, 11:04 am

Aw you totally ignored all my suggestions for you to improve your thread design.

Zens - June 19, 2017, 11:11 am

(Jun 19, 2017 11:04 AM)Maxim Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Aw you totally ignored all my suggestions for you to improve your thread design.
No, i follow your suggestion.

(Jun 17, 2017 12:23 PM)Maxim Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It's nice that you keep on making thread designs in order to improve yourself, however, I feel like you are missing basics that you keep failing on, will try to list them and hopefully, you will read it and learn from it.

First of all, you can make your thread design wider, don't be afraid of it. I always recommend a width of 900-1100 pixels. It gives you more room to work with and the thread design won't feel cloggy as it does now.

I understand how you separate the different sections, but you can do it on a much more efficient way by making different rows instead of blocks. It will give you the opportunity of varying the way you separate your sections.

Don't just randomly have blocks on your thread design to fill up empty space, instead use the space in a better way right away to avoid having to do what you did.

Again, if you would make your sections in a better way you wouldn't have to put the payment methods in small blocks. Instead, you can put it right on the new section that is another color or such.

Have a header, it will give you a better understanding right away of what the service is about. In your case you could name is something like "<name's> services and a slogan like "Your go-to guy!".

I recommend you to read this thread about making thread designs:

- The Beginners Guide to Thread Design Making

Get a better understanding of the very basics and then start to improve particular areas that you feel that you need improvement on.

Good luck.

I make it become 900x1280 (1280 because its no more space for place the payment method.)

I don't place any random block.

I not separate it become row because i confuse where i put the FAQ.

For payment method. I make it larger.

Anton Chigurh - June 19, 2017, 9:01 pm

You missed one very important step which is to make every thing into rows instead of blocks. You did kinda but not really.

radicalxfrosty - June 20, 2017, 7:16 am

It is nice, maybe you should turn the red blocks into rows.