Thread: dropped iphone

Caleb™ - June 28, 2017, 1:49 pm

so i dropped my iphone - and now theres something weird coming out through the side of the iphone, it looks like some type of rubber, it's very little - i've tried pulling it out but it's hella hard lol i need to use a tooth pick or some shit, anybody know what this is tho? and more importantly is my iphone fucked?

You can go find other threads to post low quality posts on.

"and more importantly is my iphone fucked?"

How was that a low quality post?

Can you provide a picture

This is your touchscreen, don't touch it if you want your phone to work. xD

Probably just the resin joining the screen to the base of the phone, wouldn't suggest pulling it, contact a store if you have a warranty.

Sounds like the seal for the iPhone 7 water protection.

Cammy - June 29, 2017, 7:38 am

Probably the waterproof adhesive man

Caleb™ - July 1, 2017, 5:58 am

I have an iphone 6s, so i don't have any sort of waterproof.

Your best shot would be to contact Apple Support.

I think AppleCare covers those type of damages.

Is it from the top?

Something like this?

Does your touch work properly?

Bluegenie - July 1, 2017, 6:59 am

I think it's just the rubbery glue they use to keep the screen on don't worry about it too much just get the screen fixed asap

LowkeyOG - July 1, 2017, 2:17 pm

Definitely get it fixed. I wouldn't mess with it.

Then it's probably your touch display or something.
