Old thread: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5656968>

I decided to continue it on a different thread. Anyways this is the updated version. I was going to add how far each place is based on location when I finish the "front" design.

I like the top area of it, although the gradient on the background is not actually smooth in transition and there's a lot of space on the lower side. No point in adding 72 in the brief description where there's a main temperature above. You could change the info a bit. I feel like you ignore the experience a person has when gets to view your showcase, and what I mean by that is that you do not invest in the visual descriptive information a UI has to offer. Instead of copying and pasting the same info with the same stars and people checked in, would've been better to make each segment unique, as it would offer a whole other experience while viewing. It's definitely an improvement. Try to atleast border everything in since it looks like the background is actually included in your UI. Can't wait for some updates. I like where this is going.

I like the top part.I believe that in lower side you should cut your image a little.
Generally,I find it really good :)

You could put app notifications at the bottom of the screen.
