Thread: Hour booster idler

PingersAndMash - July 7, 2017, 10:19 pm

I used to use a program where you tick boxes of the games you want to idle and you click start and it would idle the games and restart them now and then.

Steam idler only idles the games that have drops

Any programs I can buy or download that will work like the old one?

I can idle your games for really cheap. Check out my thread!

There is programs like hourbooster but you need to have your computer on 24/7.

You could use HourBoostr, but like mentioned above, your PC has to be on.

Alternatively, you could pay for a service like Steam Time Idler which will idle for you without having your PC on.

I am open to idle people accounts for free, for card drops. But the only restriction is Steam Mobile Auth cannot be on otherwise the idling won't kick back into gear when the user starts playing a game then leaves.

So for anyone who want their card drops idle I'm open to do it for free. Just hmu on Steam.

You might find that the lack of mobile auth support may turn people off, I have a similar issue with mine so I've just added a user-specific control panel where they can just stop the idle process and restart it without it requiring a new code. Not 100% automated but it works for my friends so..

Just like spiritbear said
use Hourboostr
im currently using it and its fine

Hourboostr is made by a user on this site and it works very well. I've had it running for 900+ hours at times on a VPS
