Thread: Looking to share Linux/*nix knowledge with a group

Marxist - July 12, 2017, 4:00 am

Are there any groups that may have a need to bring in someone with both personal and enterprise *nix experience?

My real life job involves working with a variety of servers and OS's. As well as enterprise networking. I've been working in this field for 7 years, and I'm starting a personal security firm here in the upcoming months.

I've been bored on HF and I'm looking to more or less help out more, and the sections I expertise in are pretty much dead.

If you need any, like, questions answered or any applications let me know. I'm not really sure which group would be most conducive for me to help in.

`RaZoR - July 12, 2017, 5:16 am

I'm in the same field, i think i like your idea.
im waiting till Omni set up my group.

Doesn't seem to be any groups for people that aren't interested in gaming, paying for a userbar, art, or being a l33t hacker.

these days groups become, earning strategy on HF.

if they can get some money they will go for it xD and there are less owners who has knowledge in those fields, well knowledge HF members now in Jail/real life job :D

I don't really care much about money or hacking, I just want to release FOSS.

It doesn't seem like there are any openly enthusiast groups, which sucks.

If you actually find a group like that hit me up, I have been hoping to find one ever since I found out about groups.

I will let you share your knowledge with my group for $200

But keep in mind - they are not the brightest of the bunch

Why am I not suprised you have the audacity to start your sentence with "I will let you" and post-fix it with "for $200?"

Paying to enter a group is a fucking joke.

My offer is no longer valid. Take your stubby linux teaching hands elsewhere!

I noticed you were developing a security firm.

You'd be a welcomed addition to The Entrepreneurs upon launch.

As with Razor we're still pending rebrand.

Funnily enough I doubt he cares about joining a money-making group, but I can't speak for him.

GI with your group.

It's not a money-making group as per the assumed definition you're giving.

Fair enough, but your description gives the appearance of it being.

Who are The Entrepreneurs?

The Entrepreneurs is a business minded group which encourages the personal & economic growth of its members. You're encouraged to engage in partnerships or discussion amongst our members. The group will cover numerous courses, online certifications, tutorials, sales tactics, books, magazines, and more. Our key topics include Digital Marketing, Data Analytics, Copywriting, Advertising, Psychology, Business Management, Money Management, Investing, Growth Hacking, Computer Science & More. We pride ourselves on operating as if a business; each member of the team provides a coherent benefit to the group & our currency of choice is knowledge. If you'd like to become a part of this team then please take the time to outline why you'd be a good fit for the group and the benefit which you would provide.

The entire group is based around learning areas of business which you're not familiar with, sharing expertise in areas which you are, and having the potential to engage in discussion or partnership with like-minded people who possess complementing capabilities.

Well that is the point of a business after all isn't it?

Let me rephrase what I assumed you meant; the group isn't about hackforums marketplace.

That's not what I meant whatsoever.

The OP of this thread isn't joining groups to participate in the marketplace, and we can assume that he's creating his own firm because he enjoys to do it, not for the money, as is the Linux way.

I gave him the opportunity to share knowledge in regards to the business side of his experiences. I don't understand why you're confused.. this offer is not meant for you.

Marxist if you're interested OP my door is open and we'd love to have you. Thanks

Thank you, Oliver.

I hope one day you will regain the status of main character on the show you're currently on, "Felicity and Friends".

There really should be a linux group and a coding group on this forum at all times. I as well would be down to join a linux group if someone starts one.

`RaZoR - July 15, 2017, 11:44 am

Wait till my group reband, i will make this in my group.

I agree, a group for people to offer proof-reading code, assistance with *nix stuff, etc.

But Omni doesn't make new groups anymore, I think, and I don't wanna buy a group lol
