Thread: Bought a sport bike

Nachfolger - July 14, 2017, 8:24 am

After wanting a motorcycle for like 4+ years I finally was able to get one.

Would post more pics but I'm replacing all the fairings. (hint: it's the one in the back)

Has 16k miles on it and looks like it was dropped quite a few times, hence me replacing the fairings. Can't wait to ride it on the road (haven't gotten tags/insurance for it yet)

Awesome, I bought my fourth super bike around 6 days ago. Bought an Aprilia RSV1000 Mille.

Love your color scheme, awesome steal for that price!

what Model?

Thats cheap as hell.

My family would kill me tho

Gary - July 14, 2017, 3:36 pm

ur lying its the one in the front

ur just a toddler

nice bike though, don;t like the colour scheme

My family didn't know I got my motorcycle license until I got it in the mail, and they didn't know I was picking up the bike until the morning of.

Wouldn't have thought its 20 years, damn.

whats the process for bike lincense if you dont mind, i know I can google but Once you go full, you never go back. The feeling.

You can always tune that 70 out ;)

70mph wouldn't work on highways where I live.

know very little of vehicles in general. When I get my bike I plan on getting a job at an auto shop to learn more, and will definitely use online resources a lot. I'm really interested in the 2015 Suzuki DR 200S because the dude only wants 1700, even though the trade in price is 2300, and it only has 1100 miles on it. Sadly he isn't replying. :(

70mph wouldn't work on highways where I live. That is exactly my concern, especially since going a supermotos max isn't comfortable. Like it would probably cruise closer to 65 comfortably.

Going to get my road license for motorcycles soon, can't wait.

Effexion - July 15, 2017, 2:18 am

I had a 2002 CBR 600 F and they are clean as fuck. Miss that machine.

Cyaddd - July 15, 2017, 11:39 am

How can you ride a motorcycle on the highway without being scared shitless. Can't trust wack ass drivers, and doesn't it get tiring after riding it for more than an hour at a time?

Motorcycles are cool, I'd like one but I'm also not tryna die

Planning on starting in my neighborhood, and I'm sure going 40mph is going to feel like going 100mph just like when I first started to drive.

might sound weird but i feel safer on a bike. have a lot more options when someone cuts u off. you can ride between em go around them. most bikes have enough power to get you out of any situation as for longer then an hour really depends on your bike/seat
