Thread: Opinion about Designer clothes.

Valdiux - July 16, 2017, 7:02 am

Hello HF!

In the Netherlands the 'Youtube-community' started doing street interviews. One of the most asked question is : How much did your outfit cost?

Now I thought it was a good idea to ask this question on HF.

My opinion about Designer clothes is:

I really like them, I wear them pretty often and I will keep doing that. My top 3 favorite brands are : DSquared 2, Kenzo and Ralph Laurens

So I've got 4 Questions for you guys.

Question 1 : Do you care about brands?

Question 2 : What is your favorite brand?

Question 3 : How much is your outfit worth if you go out with friends?

Question 4 : What is your most expensive outfit?

Lmk your opinions!

FatherTenzin - July 16, 2017, 7:10 am question 1- i care about brands a fucking lot!

question 2 - fav brands r supreme, bape, palace, ralph lauren, mnml la, comme des garcons, acne question3 - my outfit changes depending on where im at. but if im out with friends i like to dress good depending on who im hanging out with question 4- my most expensive out fit could maybe be like around 700$.

Abe Washington - July 16, 2017, 7:11 am

My most expensive outfit is probably my suit. I don't care about brands. Typically I just wear a polo and khakis.

Question 1 : Do you care about brands? Yes, I mostly care about brands

Question 2 : What is your favorite brand? Dsquared, Versace, Gucci, Tommy Hilfiger

Question 3 : How much is your outfit worth if you go out with friends? Depends on where & who I'm going with.

Question 4 : What is your most expensive outfit? Armani suit

SLY™ - July 16, 2017, 7:37 am

Used to really be into until I realized I'm following hypes. I hate hypes. Most expensive outfit before I sold all my crap was $650 DOLCE Gabbana Jeans, $350 Jordan Master 12s Shoes, $400 Louis Vuitton Belt, $125 Ralph Lauren Polo, $1000 Gucci watch, $20 Versace socks, $40 boxers. Also under my belt was a $700 Sig Sauer webdev77 - July 16, 2017, 7:37 am

1. It depends what it is. Largely, not really.

2. Not sure. Nike if I have to pick I guess. Nothing fancy.

3. $200 usually. Quite low if you actually add up what you are wearing including shoes.

4. Roughly $1200 for my good suit.

Arkks - July 16, 2017, 7:39 am

Question 1 : Yes I care about brands.

Question 2 : Don't really have a favorite but I like Adidas, Supreme, nikesb, bape,

Question 3 : It depends what im doing, when im skating my "outfit" is a lot cheaper then if i were to just go out with mates. So when im skating (shoes - $100, socks - $5, pants - $20, underwear - $20, shirt - $30 - $50, jacket/hoodie $100 - $200, hat(sometimes) - $50, ALLTOGETHER - $335 AUD $278USD) When im out with friends (shoes - $200, socks $20, pants $30, underwear - $20, shirt $50 - $150, jacket/hoodie $150 - $400, hat(sometimes) $50 - $80, ALLTOGETHER $920AUD $720USD

Question 4 : I have a variety of things to wear but if I wore the most expensive stuff it would come near $1000

i didnt mention any items such as watches, chains and stuff like that but depends what im wearing just items alone can come around to $200 - $500

Lukas - July 16, 2017, 8:22 am

Question 1 : Do you care about brands?
Not necessarily, if I like it I buy it.

Question 2 : What is your favorite brand?
N/A

Question 3 : How much is your outfit worth if you go out with friends?
Depends on where we go, if it's to a party, then somewhere around $200, same for a lower tier dinner, but if it's to a nice restaurant, I'd say more along the lines of $400.

Question 4 : What is your most expensive outfit?
My suit which costs ~$3k.

I have a few pieces of designer apparel but I rarely wear them. My style has changed over the years and I'm into more modest clothing now.

Brands really don't matter to me. It just depends on how the clothes look, to be honest.

DOUGHBOY BALENCIAGA - July 16, 2017, 7:11 pm

No one where I lives really knows much about brands I enjoy so I haven't really bought any designer brands as of late. I have a lot of expensive pieces but usually I dress pretty normal.

I'd say on average I wear a $60 Lacoste polo shirt, a pair of $70 chino shorts and a $70 pair of Stan Smith sneakers. Pretty reasonable, but I do wear a $3000 Tag Heuer as my every day watch.

If I'm going somewhere and I want to flex, I'll throw on my $150 Off-White t shirt, a pair of $300 Givenchy pants and $260 Colette x Asics sneakers, and wear my Tag Heuer. If I wear a hat I'd wear my Palasonic hat ($100 resale). If I'm wearing Flip Flops I got a $300 pair of Pradas that I got in Italy.

I personally prefer smaller, more lowkey brands like Burma, Paradise Youth Club and Stray Rats. I can't fuck with the fitting on high designer brands.

Do you care about brands? yes and no- I care more about quality

What is your favorite brand? SLP and burberry

How much is your outfit worth if you go out with friends? can range from like $100 to like $6000

What is your most expensive outfit? like 7.5k (pants, shoes, shirt, and jacket) quality is most important. if you think of your clothes in terms of an investment your wardrobe will reflect the worth you assign to each item.

I wear $5 white tees as well as $80 ones, depends on the occasion and what impression you want to make.

Bombaclut - July 19, 2017, 12:14 pm

1. Product Quality – Many people who don't believe in buying designer brands say that you are only paying for the brand name and that the product is no better than any other. While you are paying in part for the "privilege" to wear the brand's name, you are also probably purchasing a product that is high quality. For example, I buy designer denim because it fits better and lasts longer than the jeans I buy for $25.00 at Bob's. Designer clothes are usually made from finer fabrics and have superior stitching compared to those of bargain stores.

2. Consistency – Most people who wear designer clothes swear by a few designers. For example, someone might own thirty pairs of Paige jeans but refuse to even look at Joe's Jeans. Both are expensive, high quality brands, so what's the difference? Paige jeans consistently fit, last, and look great, where Joe's Jeans aren't as flattering (this isn't my personal opinion, it's just an example). People keep going back to the same brands because they consistently perform well for them.

3. Self Identity – Certain brands represent certain things (according to the advertising class I took last semester). For example, Ralph Lauren represents classic preppy. Club Monaco is worn most often by young stylish professionals. Abercrombie reminds you of a skinny and popular thirteen year old girl. People buy certain brands because what you wear represents who you are.

4. Social Status – Wearing designer clothing aligns you with an elite group: those who can afford it. People who wear designer clothing recognize designer clothing. They can also usually recognize cheap clothing. When you are wearing a Juicy Couture dress, you appear wealthier and of higher social status than others. And who doesn't want others to be insanely jealous of your clothes?

5. Uniqueness and Rarity – Ok, so this one is pretty similar to #3 and 4, but I have another point I need to make. Why is a Monet painting so expensive? Because it's rare. Why are designer clothes so expensive? Bingo, you got it. If you pay $45.00 for an (overpriced) Abercrombie tank top, I guarantee you that during its shelf life in your wardrobe, you will run into at least 3 people who own the exact same tank and at least 20 people who own a tank very similar. If you pay $500.00 for a pair of Balenciaga shoes, I can almost guarantee you that no one else will be wearing them at the same time as you. You're never going to experience that awkward moment where you bump into someone wearing the same outfit as you, which you probably handle by smiling and saying "Nice outfit!"

6. Celebrities Wear Designer Clothes – Yes, it's stupid to buy something just because Nicole Richie wears it. Have I done it? Yup. I own three Pimp tops even though the only reason Pimp became trendy is because Paris Hilton and Britney Spears both wear it. Celebrities started the big sunglasses trend (or Rachel Zoe started making celebrities wear big sunglasses). Now I own a pair of huge sunglasses (which my boyfriend doesn't hesitate to call hideous). People copy celebrities, and no matter how shallow or sheep-in-a-flock syndromish (yea it's not a word) that is, it's always going to be that way. Celebrities are like living bulletin boards for designers.

Designer brands can be great to wear, you have to look clean and appealing to be able to network with others which is very important. A wise person told me once, not holding a 'name' to yourself may cost you hundreds, thousands or maybe millions of dollars. Think about it.

Question 1 : Do you care about brands?

Yes and No. It's not the deciding factor, but if it's a cool brand it'll add those extra points.

Question 2 : What is your favorite brand?

Mostly sports brands like Nike, Under Armor, Jordan, etc. I play a lot of basketball.

Question 3 : How much is your outfit worth if you go out with friends?

$200 and maybe a little bit over.

Question 4 : What is your most expensive outfit?

Probably my suit, I THINK it was a grand, not TOO sure.

A wise person told me once, not holding a 'name' to yourself may cost you hundreds, thousands or maybe millions of dollars. Think about it.

Yep, it's true. Everything in the world is about money..
