We use an obfuscator to stop people taking code and then re-selling. It comes up detected. I hope you can understand just run in sandboxie

Tro yeh - July 21, 2017, 2:14 am

KapitanZvezda - August 3, 2017, 6:06 am

Downloaded, looked at it, ran in Sandboxie. Malwarebytes detects nothing but Windows Defender does? Seems legit either way igotdatgudgud - August 3, 2017, 6:12 am

Nice idea and execution. Will be playing around with this, sandboxed of course.

Baud - August 3, 2017, 10:18 am

Some detection softwares may flag the program because a code obfuscator has been used to prevent decompiling.

jumper191112 - August 4, 2017, 12:59 am thanks for sharing guy very interesting tool bronzegods - August 4, 2017, 3:01 am

First, don't sue virustotal to scan files, second, read what I wrote above.

Noah L. Pearson - August 4, 2017, 9:22 am

No, offence, but this seems fishy. You are lowering security, and giving someone your email and password. Might as well give them your mothers maiden name, Social Security Number, and your card number.

If you don't trust us, don't download the program. It's as simple as that. You can look at our other threads and see by yourself how we work for the community for the sake of information and knowledge, it's your choice whether to trust us or not.

If you're so skeptic, monitor your local traffic while executing the program on a sandbox.

Yeah because anyone would pay for a server just to give people for free to spam from no. You use your own SMTP server, it's only asking for an email or password as most do have their own SMTP so they use Gmail.

Slavka - August 5, 2017, 7:56 am

MrShakoz - August 5, 2017, 8:22 am
