Thread: C# - Aether Theme For Winform \(Progress\)

shiroze - July 21, 2017, 8:33 pm

Well this theme is based on @Naywyn who's using VB.net code in his theme and now I'm convert them into C# but only 2 Control TabControl & Circular Control (will update in the future)

You may use this theme in your applications or even sell your application with this theme as long as you give credits.

Here is the link:

<https://pastebin.com/TaJBadQu> (C#)

Here Link (VB.NET)

Enjoy the theme

Ninja - July 21, 2017, 8:34 pm

Conversion is not needed. The theme can be put in a wrapper and referenced from C# even when coded in VB.

Abducted - July 21, 2017, 8:35 pm

Good job man. I've tried making C# themes myself but only failed so far because they were lagging a lot for somereason.

DoubleBuffering fixes this usually.

I don't know, I can't even compile the code anymore, the project started lagging like shit.

well I'm just helping man, just appreciate people work even you don't need it... at least share some knowledge here so people can use it too ?

Work smarter not harder.

Converting the code to learn is one thing, but imo it is absolutely useless to release.

akapm47 - July 21, 2017, 11:17 pm

cool.. nice work bro. keep it up

I'm confused. Who do we give credit to if we use this? The person who actually wrote it, you for porting it, or both? Going to be honest, this whole thread is kind of silly.

VmX5 - July 23, 2017, 1:07 pm

There literally is no need for this thread, there are ways to use vb.net themes in C# and the other way around. I understand you're learning but you didn't need to post this, It's like if I learnt how to use a message box so I post a thread about a program that shows nothing but a plain message box.

give Credit to The Original person, Im just converting to C#.

and to anyone that say its not neccessary its okay, maybe the hardwork Im doing is just useless.
and thanks to this forum for not motivated me to making it anymore.

I'M STOPED MAKING THIS NO UPDATE ANYMORE....

Thanks Man Thanks Everyone

Nobody told you to stop doing this, we said that you didn't need to post this. We said that you could do it for educational purposes, you could do it to learn but there was no need for you to post this im just using it on my own not release at here I said that clearly...

Yeah I stopped... Im not doing it at here anymore...

Code "I'M STOPED MAKING THIS NO UPDATE ANYMORE...."

The part you quoted literally contradicts what you said in your previous post.

So I don't understand one thing : user came here, converted a VB.NET theme to C# for free, why you even complain ?

Some might reply "Buuuh it's not needed just compile the theme into dll and reference it" yes indeed as a matter of fact you can do this but what if I don't want to have an horrible .dll file or what if I want to modify the theme and I know C# but i'm not at ease with VB.NET ?

What I see here is a bunch of people that follow the same non-sensical ideas. It has already been posted that for some reason this post is not needed. First thing is that none of the post on this forum are needed, everything here is contingent, and second is that it's free, and finally why would you post "useless thread" a second time ? OP is not blind, he read the replies and he saw somebody yelling it's useless thread, why on earth would you post the exact same message again ?

Really give me solid arguments because you all act like full childish mor*ns here.

0xDEAD10CC - July 24, 2017, 8:10 pm

The way I see it, if someone wanted to modify this theme but didn't know enough on the VB.net language to convert it themselves this would help in doing that too... There are online converters but they are still shit IMHO and don't work all the time. Or minimizing what is used from the theme and having it linked in with the exe without having to use a tool like ILmerge that would combine everything too.

Finn. - July 24, 2017, 9:58 pm

Uhm if anyone wants the theme (complete) here you go: <https://ufile.io/1ntyty> hfTP54 - August 2, 2017, 9:04 am

Dude wants to contribute, what's wrong with that?

I say keep up, start making a theme of ur own(in c#) if you are interested, no need for this copy-paste shit, it will be yours.

Younis Khan - August 2, 2017, 11:44 pm

"I'M STOPED MAKING THIS" had me laughing but yeah i dont see a problem with OP posting this. dont discourage him from learning! but i would suggest u make the theme urself OP, itll help u learn even more.

adenfr - July 27, 2018, 5:57 am hey how to add tags laiike yours in tabcontrol 12 and +8 tags !!!
