Thread: "HF King" status userbar

T?kki - July 26, 2017, 6:12 am

Ok, so this is a little far-fetched to be in the suggestions.

We all know a certain someone loves money, I am not going to mention his name, but he owns this forum.

A "HF King" user-bar.

You put it out for sale for 1$ under the upgrades.

You pay the 1$, put in the UID of you/friend, and pay for it.

Now, the next person, wanting to wear the crown has to pay 2$, or if someone pays 10$ then it's 11$, you get the drill.

It would be fun to see how much it would reach, and how people fight about it.

Update :

A golden username, making yourself highly visible on the "who's online" section.

Ability to post a sticky thread lasting 14-30 days for holding the title of for a duration of 72 hours

If you should somehow get banned "permanently or temporarily" will the previous person hold the crown while you are absent.

There should be a minimum Requirement for becoming an "HF King", giving deserving members the chance to have been king, and one to potentially stay king.

To remain king you have to login MINIMUM 1 time every month, a true king never leaves the castle forever.

Unique award to the person holding the "HF King" title for over 90 days, if the person gets their kingdom overthrown, the award follows the new crowned king.

I also think instead of increasing with 1$ which was a suggestion, it should be 5$, and to decide who gets it, could easily be sorted by having a "HF King" Thread, where whomever post 5$ first secures themselves the spot, for 10$, 15$ and so on, and anyone noticing they are behind, could edit or delete their entry upon discovering they were late. This makes it also even more competitive. This will only be spammy until it reaches upwards of 500+.

Frankey - July 26, 2017, 6:13 am

That's a sick idea! :D Would like to see this implemented.

Mr. Robot - July 26, 2017, 6:14 am

Actually a really interesting concept.

Like king of the hill - only one can have it.

Bossk - July 26, 2017, 6:16 am

Fun concept, but I would only make it 1-step incremental, it'd be fun because a ton of people would be able to take a shot at it and become king for a few seconds.

Although I can imagine that this would bring some technical issues when hundreds or thousands of people are trying to become king, payment merging etc..

It's probably best to just make a new user group in the long run, available to everyone.

F?cgle?? - July 26, 2017, 6:19 am

This would be cool but it should reset monthly or something. It would eventually get to the point where nobody wants to pay more and it would die out.

Any suggestions for the benefits of the userbar than the visual?

being a standing member with a "HF King" userbar, is sure to bring admiration and jealousy from a ton of members, as-well as respect in the long run, for dedicating the high amount it would reach.

Well, the person standing last, with the userbar, would certainty not be a random "dropping by" member, for the amount they invested.

Kind of defeats the purpose. That way the one with the most money around the time becomes king for a year, whilst this idea is a constantly changing variable.

No, but what I'm saying is nobody is going to want to go over a certain amount.

Example: Someone drops $10k on it. Who's going to top that? Probably nobody. It will die out because it will stay with that person and it won't be a fad anymore.

So that makes him the king. It's something that should be rare. If nobody is willing to go over him, it will finally have a king. And I assume there'll always be someone to top it, eventually.

It would die out sooner then. Once it hits $100 or so nobody is going to pay $101 when someone can come right after them and pay $102. Then the original person has to pay $103 to get it back.

It would have to be a weekly or monthly thing.

Then Member A only has to pay $2 more to beat Member B to reach $22.

2073436 - July 26, 2017, 7:32 am

Does one have to decide to sell it or do people just go to a page and see what the new price for buying it is?

Pretty sure no one would spend $500 on something that could be purchased away within minutes. So there would have to be a time limit for the demand to increase

At that rate, it is rather stupid than profitable.

Bossk - July 26, 2017, 7:39 am

To spice things up even more - the one who is able to hold the position for ~72 hours will be granted an award.

Makaveli The Don - July 26, 2017, 7:39 am

So according to your idea, every time a HF user wants the userbar, he has to purchase it for 1$ more than the previous owner.

Doing some math, If we start at $1 and the price at one point reaches $500: $501 \cdot 500 / 2 = $125,250$.

Not a bad idea at all. ?

How would this work with crypto currencies? Because first person to get however many confirmations, is the winner for like 2 seconds. I agree with this, it's a good idea.

Cause if it goes up to 1k, someone pays 1k +1$, the previous buyer should be able to battle, as real kings would do, to see who ends up the real king.

Hello (previous king)

Cool idea if you didn't have to pay for it I think.

Like, the UB randomly decides to go to another user every x posts or something.

No not really. It's different because you can only access the group while you have the UB.

Once the UB is passed on you lose access to the group. So it's basically just one forum with a bunch of random secrets passed into it. I think it'd be a neat idea.

And there should be some kind of statistic on how much the "Current" user paid for it.

I love how we are all freaking out over a cool new way to give omni more money than ever before haha however I'm not nearly wealthy enough to compete in this but I think it would be very cool to watch others battle it out

I would def try for it at the lower price ranges and if I got it I would deffo screenshot it and set the pic as my siggy or something to flex on people that I was the hf king at one point

I also love the page with all the previous kings and rankings on how long they've owned the title and/or how many times they've owned the title omni if you add this you're probably gunna end up the next satoshi nakomoto with all them BTC ur gunna be hoarding haha the ONLY issue I can possibly see with this is the bitcoin confirmation issues that may arise with 2 people buying at the same time. If that is figured out then we have a perfect suggestion id say omni please allow us to throw money at you as a community LOL

TRAUMA - July 26, 2017, 3:52 pm

The first few dollars people would do it just because, but after that it's a waste.

Because the people with a lot of money wouldn't do it, because they know someone can pay $1 more and poof even $1,000+ can be gone.

And the ones who are willing to spend $1,000+ have that much money for a reason, they arnt stupid with their money.

If this got implemented, there would probably be some kind of "barrier / lock".

So if someone paid for it, it should lock until the payment has gone through and the confirmations.

Not sure how it would work though since I don't know anything about stuffs like that haha.

My idea of this would be as follows:

1. HF King is awarded to person that wants to donate for it.
 2. Donations will double each purchase. $1, $2, $4, $8, $16, $32 etc.
 3. Once a person has purchased the rank and gets bought out(someone else's donates for it), that person could buy it again.
 4. Users who purchase it twice will get an award the second time they purchase. After 2 times they can't purchase anymore.
 5. Donation would reset every 6 months. Go back to $1. Anyone that has double purchased can purchase but no longer gets the award for double purchase.
 6. Basic Requirement is L33T/3PIC upgrade with at least 120 days onsite.
 7. Add a special award for the last person to receive the "HF King" userbar prior to reset.

But another option I would like to get added in that case is:

The person that had the userbar last time before it got reset, would get some rare award proving he was the last one wearing it.

Hate the guidelines (#2). It should be a custom bid. Who is going to be the one who pays $64 and knows they're gonna be outbidded. Imo it should be 'pay what you think it is worth'. #4 is pointless. People should be able to donate as much as they like. I agree strongly with #5. No awards at all though. Adding awards is unnecessary and having to remove the award each time someone is outbidded will mean a lot of extra work for Omni and will not really benefit anyone having a temporary award. IF ANYTHING, give an award to the highest bidder at the end of the 6 months. #6 is also pretty pointless, I doubt anyone who is not upgraded will want to buy it anyway, but if they want to bid and donate to HF, then why not! Ohh and yeah you got #7 right lol. I'd also add some colors/custom userstarts. Maybe the full 10 stars with it's own color (say red).

Actually gold could be cool!

I disagree with custom bids because some people won't have the ability to outbid others. I see this as being more of a fun thing than anything else. As for the removal of the double purchase awards, I never said they would be removed. Just never added again once you purchased twice. And I added the I33t upgrade requirement because this shouldn't be for just any person on HF. As for the custom colors, that works for me.

Now that I think of it again, no one will ever spend $5k on something that could all be taken away within a matter of days over a $1 bid

This is just mainly entertainment for a week.

People like this because they all just want to see it happening but what they don't realize is that it'll be over very quick.

People don't like purchasing things they aren't in control over

Imagine 5 people ready to drop 200-300, the first one to drop 200 would only keep it for minutes

Why would you bother spending that for just minutes/hours?

Practically, the idea on its own is bad. People just like drama and entertainment but not many people will actually buy at larger prices

Point is, just the userbar is definitely not enough

1. Okay
2. Why? This isn't necessarily a good idea because after a couple times of doubling you get to huge amounts.

If this would be implemented, it'd require more frequent resets

3. Meh, if I wanted to really monetize this concept, I would not do this. There are only so many rich members.
4. Not sure if Omniscient would like to hand out awards just like that.
Also, he'd either have to make it automated or follow the whole happening.
5. 6 months is too much if the price keeps doubling. It won't be affordable at the end of the six months.
6. Okay, makes sense
7. Makes sense as well, it's another motive to be the last and also buy at the highest price.

All in one, this isn't very easy to add I suppose.

I'm pretty sure Omniscient has other, more important things to work around than implementing a system which could benefit him with monetization of it and also entertainment but there is no guarantee this will roll out well.

If he implemented this system and it didn't work as everyone thought it'd work, that'd be a huge waste of time.

I feel like there's still lack of motive.

It's one of these concepts that look very nice but when you think about the technical and practical side of it, meh.

I'd like to see it, though.

Interesting idea, but IMO it would be more viable with a time floor. It's very likely that the award's price will get jacked up to $500+ in a matter of minutes, if not hours, and the fun would quickly be over.

If on the other hand, there was a security window of 24-hours, there would be this idea of an "HF King for the day." When 24-hours passes, the position is up for grabs and the first person to pay becomes the king. This also promotes a sense of competition — it's almost like trying to cop sneakers the second they become available.

I completely disagree. ./ You will get to a point where the bid is at $1024 and to double it would be $2048. Little Timmy has $1,500 and would LOVE to purchase it, but sadly cannot.

So every 6 months, whoever bids $1024 wins! And it becomes a little boring.

It'll just eventually get to a stage where it'll barely be taken off a user because the price is way too high. It's a fun concept at first but the hype will just go away once it becomes expensive.

If you wanted to alter it, auction the rank off weekly/monthly, highest bidder gets the rank for that week/month and then auction it off again once the times up. Make 50% of the funds also go to a charity of choice as well maybe?

Running a business with the intent to earn a profit should not define a person as a money lover. Wish I still had RKO. :(

Even if your idea is interesting, it's not very nice to insult me while making it.

Also, with fees for BTC going pretty high it's pointless to use it for micropayments now. Which is a real shame. No longer can you do $1 payments with a 3 cent fee. Sometimes you'll pay $1 to send $1. So your idea has to have a floor ($5 maybe).

I really don't like the idea of making this a game that I profit from. It's like the Clover award where it's just random and it's for fun.

Quote:That is great until it hits like $500 or more.... good idea to money harvest, but I think a lot of members would ultimately feel cheated.

This is why I would not do this and why it's not a good idea. It's just not a good value buy for members which means it reflects poorly off me as the seller.

I'd be more interested in doing something similar based off post, character count, or some other tangible number on HF instead of money. Would be more fun if we had a points system on HF again (MYPS) like we used to all those years ago. I'm sure hardly anyone remembers the $HAX.

And I have a better concept...what if there was a HOT POTATO REPUTATION. It starts with a random logged in member. If that member has the HPR then you just have to give them a positive reputation to steal it from them. Would spread reps like crazy but yet random. Yes, I am the King of Ideas.

I read all the replies. You guys are loving the suggestion but I'm not so keen on it. HF needs more fun and less worry about my profits. Members donate and I get advertising and upgrade payments. It's more than enough. I have fees for extra work directed to me like account recoveries and group changes. I just don't see the need to make something like this.

I don't think people can really complain about you as the seller! They are paying $500 or whatever it is to have this temporarily. They know that they run a risk of losing it.

I think a guideline could be that you have to pay double or more what the current bid is at. Say it is $1,000 currently, I push it up to $2,000. It automatically send $1,000 of mine to the last bidder and 1,000 goes to HF.

I know it'd be a bit of work to refund people if they are outbid but then maybe people wouldn't feel as cheated. I still don't think people can really feel cheated!

I think the hot potato reputation idea would just flood unnecessary positive reputations to people who don't deserve positive rep?

Personally, I don't think reputations should be a game at all. I think it is very valued in the marketplace as a sign of respect and would take the integrity of reputations away from the forums.

We could add a new button called 'tag' and just 'tag' users. It'd probably be more work though and idk if the game will be popular.

An award to the user who has the potato at the end of the day would be cool. And also, randomly give the potato to a user when they make a post. So at 12:00 am everyday, award a user for having the potato, or maybe even every week, then give the potato to a random user who posts, then they have to lay low. If someone sees their profile, notices the potato, then they can steal it. You also will not know who took the potato off you, so then it's a chase to find out who actually has it. I think that'd be fun to look through the members and eventually notice who has the potato. Could be cool to limit this to L33T/UB3R/R3KT so that new users who post randomly don't get the potato. Maybe show it on a profile or something so it is even harder to hide the fact you have it lol.

Potato couldn't change your username color or anything as then people could look at the online members list and notice who has it! It has to be kept secret until at a certain time each week when an award or something of the sort is given to the user who still has it!
