Thread: H3God \(Business Blueprint\) uid=1359715 Copying Other Peoples Content Word for Word

J. McCarthy - July 27, 2017, 11:01 am

Was just checking out his latest content on pastebin. Wow this guy is a great writer with unique content.

Check it out!

<https://pastebin.com/8Mr6wftK>

Thread/sig comparison:

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

I was happy to see half my own thread in it copied down to the comma.

Oh yes also they like my signatures to so now we can be twins

At least he asked the graphics designer to not copy it word for word.
much quality.

Anyways the reason this urks me is I do copywriting for a living and the fact that people just take your work and claim it as their own is beyond annoying. I see it the same as someone ripping HF's theme or a music sheet or a graphic designer. It's not fair. I understand competition will adapt to the alpha in the market but seriously you can't even change a comma....

Even the most unique part of his package was from another version of my thread ;/

<https://gyazo.com/f1eb3b960912af7568a7eb7fb19fb891>

sorry to the other guys who thread he also copied chunks from I just didn't bother researching your stuff too.

Here is a nice educational song you should consider listening to.

[Video: <https://youtu.be/Pyk8881tLE>]

All jokes aside here is my POV.

I make the majority of my living as a copywriter, for those unfamiliar with this term, it means I'm a content writer. As a content writer, my job is to create compelling copy (words). This is the same as a graphic designer who creates graphics, a programmer who writes programs or a forum developer who created a site/forum. How would you feel if someone just highlighted and copied chunks of your project, pasted them into their own, then told people who noticed the similarities that you, in fact, copied them not vice-versa? Is it annoying yes? Yes, it happens and yes I fight it all the time. It's plagiarism. If he's allowed to do it then everyone's allowed to do it. This is NOT about them adapting to follow me in the market, I am open arms to help many sellers. However, I am NOT going to support someone simply copying and pasting my word.

Biker BoyZ - July 27, 2017, 11:02 am

I always thought this, he literally comes out with every trending ebook and brings out his own like a few days later.

Stashyy - July 27, 2017, 11:04 am

or that the ebook market is complete shit and fake

Copywriter - July 27, 2017, 11:04 am

Jesus fucking Christ... it's literally a duplicate.
That is pretty damn LQ.

Yeah what really pushed me over is a guy messaged me asking if I had the same product as him... I asked why would you think that? He said, because you have the same videos on your thread. I said oh boy another copy from me. He says "Oh H3god told everyone you copied him"

Go back to posting google stock cash photos hegod

As I said this is about my work as a copywriter being stolen.

If he is allowed to do it then everyone is allowed to do it. IF everyone can do it then I have no business copywriting anymore.

I see it the same as someone stealing a bunch of parts of HackForums and making there own knockoff forum then saying omni copied them (to put in terms of reference to him).

This is not copying my idea, this is literally word for word plagiarism.

I feel like he needs to listen to this

OOOOOOOOOOOO!!! You plagiarizzled!
HAHA! And now you're in big troubizzle!
Don't plagiarizzle. You get into troubizzle!
Don't plagiarizzle. You get into troubizzle!
Don't plagiarizzle. You get into troubizzle!
Don't plagiarizzle. You get into troubizzle!
Like ooooooooooooooooooooooooooooo!

Plagiarism. Let me tell you what it is.
Stealing somebody else's ideas.
Taking their words and claiming they're your own.
Plagiarism, man, it's just wrong.
It's cheating, it's stealing, whatcha need another reason?
I knew this kid from class, his name was Steven.
He had a paper due on April 17th.
He got on the web and started researching.
He found an article, it was quite eloquent.
And it sounded so good why write it again.
So he copied and pasted it into his paper
It was word for word, man, verbatim,
He didn't cite a source or write a bibliography,
Little did he know he was plagiarizing.
He took the paper to class the next day.
The teacher failed him and all the kids were saying . . .

OOOOOOOOOOOO!!! You plagiarizzled!
HAHA! And now you're in big troubizzle!
Don't plagiarizzle. You get into troubizzle!

Don't plagiarizzle. You get into troubizzle!
Don't plagiarizzle. You get into troubizzle!
Like ooooooooooooooooooooooooooooo!

Plagiarism. How do you avoid it.
It's really quite simple all you gotta to is this.
Give credit, where credit is due.
Cite your source if it wasn't written by you.
You can use quotes or paraphrase.
And when you do, cite the author's last name.
Write according to and then acknowledge the author

Like J.K. Rowling wrote Harry Potter.
Now put it down in the bibliography.
And make sure you format it correctly.
In the MLA citation style
And tell that plagiarism bye-bye y'all.
Finally to avoid plagiarizzle,
Use your own words and be original.
Cause if you plagiarize you're only cheating yourself.
So speak for yourself and nobody's gonna yell . . .

OOOOOOOOOOOO!!! Youplagiarizzled!

The thread
even his thread title " [$50,000+ REAL EARNING PROOF] ==> LEARN HOW TO MAKE
$2,500+/WEEK WITH NO EFFORT <== (Pages: 1 2 3 4 ... 50)" is an exact copy up until "With No

Nah reason the thread is being hyped is because copygod needs to be publicly shamed. Users need to be aware of his scummy tactics and what he's been doing to take advantage of the new user base for the last however long.

If I had your source code and front end and copied half of it, created my own, and said that you in fact copied it from me how would you feel?

I'm sure you've dealt with copies and don't tell me you've been happy with it. For the last time this is not about an ebook it's about my service as a copywriter to which I have written many many threads for people on HackForums.

I don't give a shot about the $50 a month he makes selling his ebook.

Furthermore to this post I was contacted by them two weeks prior to write the threads. They said they didn't need me. Clearly this is why

Cracked copies of software qualifies as copyright infringement, right? ?

I am not sitting here bitching how people are ripping me off by cracking my software and I am not making as much as I SHOULD BE.

Naaaaa man never had that problem ever before. lol

In business we call it Shrinkage. And it obviously is something we try to prevent as possible, but it is simply a reality of business and products. People steal shit. Don't matter what it is.

No, but you almost opened a scam report over a meme thread fox made?

Seriously man? That disappoints me you think it's okay. Copywriting is no different than software development in terms of creation.

This is me trying to prevent it. I made a thread.

That "Meme" thread could have potentially been an exit scam, excuse me for being on the ball for seeing shit for what it is online, I guess that might be the reason I have so very little reason to open scam reports against others.

Alerts on the other hand, If its posted as serious, it needs to be taken as serious, only takes a couple retards to do a proper exit scam. Think about it.

And I disappoint you?

You been around here long enough, you disappoint me for not seeing what can be clear as day at times.

As for 'Fox, I got nothing against the guy, he seems chill enough, but that was a bad joke and people in that stature should not make that type of "Meme" it is in bad taste and really fucks new members up.

No, disallowment is not suitable, he should be sued for infringement from the actual owners of the content, but that will never happen.

On this I agree, I could sue numerous people for cracking Orcus and legally prove they did it too.

Wardow was the first. But again, WTF is the point, its legal costs, time and paperwork, for minimal loss.
