Thread: Free Year Of Sprint Service, ENDS TONIGHT

This promotion ends tonight for anyone who may be short on cash.

You have to transfer service to sprint, and pay a few administration fees <($10 a month). I know sprint isn't the best service, but keep in mind this is unlimited Talk/Text/Data. For <$10 a month for a year.

Theres no catch. You can transfer out at any time. Just posting this because it ends tonight

I read an article, and they read through the whole ToS of the promotion, theres nothing. When you go to activate the SIM, they will try to throw on all this extra shit you wouldn't want, but you can decline

Your Sim? I've never known Sprint to use Sim cards.

I wish they did, I would try this out. Right now I use a Verizon no contract plan and I have a sim card in my S6 edge. So I guess I'm not eligible for this. :(

I just saw they do use Sim cards now? Fuck me when did that happen? My parents both have sprint with no sim. Anyways, it says after today you have to pay $60 per line?

Sprint uses sim cards. They started to use sims after there was LTE phones. Yes, after today the promotion is over. (It might end at 12AM PST)

Where I live AT&T sucks ass and so does Verizon.

Sprint is bad man, I decided to take up TMobile on their unlimited deal rather than the free year with Sprint. Main point is that they can't port over my number from a MVNO that is already registered with their network. Like are they that dumb, it's already on a whitelist to be used on their network. All they have to do is associate the IMEI with the sim. Second point being is that I have seen more chances of fraud happening against a account with them compared to any other carrier.

And when I tried to help out with a friend's account, I couldn't get a person who knew what to do about activating a iPhone on their network. I figured it wasn't worth my time at all to deal with them or give them any business.
